FIRE BOMB of the Molotov cocktail variety is hurled by two students against riot police from one of eight "fortresses" at site of new Tokyo International Airport this morning. About 5,000 police were mobilized to protect officials and workers requisitioning the land near Narita where opposing farmers and leftist students have been holding demonstrations. Three riot policemen were killed, 100 were injured. Site is a second international airport for Tokyo. (AP Wirephoto)

BENSON FEARS TRADE 'WAR'

LONDON (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today urged a fundamental reform of the world monetary system to prevent any outbreak of a devastating international trade war.

Benson told an emergency meeting of the 10 richest non-Communist nations—the Group of 10—that recent United States measures to protect the American economy pose a serious threat to the freedom of world trade.

Benson, this year's chairman of the group, said a full examination of the current monetary system should be made by the International Monetary Fund.

"We must proceed at once with the process of currency realignment and proceed as quickly as possible with the reduction of trade restrictions throughout the world," the Canadian minister said.

"It would facilitate the immediate adjustments required if our American colleagues could tell us more precisely what conditions ..., have to be met before they will remove the (10-per-cent import) surcharge."

Benson was referring to a U.S. decision announced Aug. 15 to impose the new import duty and to suspend the gold convertibility of the dollar.

Benson said the present instability in international monetary markets has forced a number of countries to restrict capital flows in an effort to ease pressure on their currencies.

"The real danger is that this pattern of restriction will be extended to the trade field.

"This points to the urgent necessity of dealing with the present situation before it degenerates into a process that will be extremely difficult reverse."

The minister said it is unlikely any satisfactory set of exchange rates can be negotiated while the import duty remains in effect.

He said extensive action is needed to "dissipate the serious clouds that now hang over the future of international trade."

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer managing director of the IMF, urged the Group of 10 today to adopt a four-point compromise plan for overcoming the monetary crisis.

Schweitzer unveiled a plan that conference sources said included these points:

1. A general realignment in the exchange rates of the world's leading currencies, including an upward revaluation of the major European currencies and the Japanese yen and a downward devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

2. A new reserve system in which special drawing rights in the IMF would assume some of the reserve role backing currencies now held by gold.

3. An effort to swing the U.S. balance of payments from its current deficit to a surplus, in which the U.S. allies would assume a share of the burden.

4. After the achievement of these steps the time would be ripe to remove the 10-per-cent duty on imports.

No clear-cut solutions are expected at the end of the two-day emergency conference of the group which began Wednesday.

No More Trade Curbs, Canada Pleads

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has appealed to the United States to refrain from imposing additional trade restrictions in response to a proposed program to provide federal subsidies to Canadian exporters.

A letter to U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally from Finance Minister E. J. Benson asks him to regard the subsidy program as a measure to maintain employment, not as a form of retaliation against U.S. import surcharges imposed last month.

At the same time, Canadian authorities are asking Japan and European trading partners to guard against permitting a heavy increase of exports to Canada.

Officials are particularly worried that shipments of steel, automobiles and textile products originally intended for the U.S. market may be diverted into Canada, disrupting markets here.

The government's actions were disclosed today by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin at a session of the Commons finance committee.

The appeals to Canada's trading partners constitute efforts to minimize disruption of Canadian trade, production and employment resulting from the U.S. trade restrictions invoked Aug. 15.

Canada has appealed unsuccessfully for exemption from the U.S. surcharges. At the same time, it is attempting to persuade Japan and Western Europe to co-operate in developing a new system of currency exchange that would benefit U.S. trade.

In the meantime, there are official fears in Ottawa that the program to help Canadian exporters—carrying grants that would cover up to two-thirds of the U.S. surcharges—will trigger U.S. countervailing duties against the entry of Canadian goods.

It depends on whether the U.S. treasury secretary regards the Canadian legislation as an export-subsidy program — thereby triggering countervailing duties—or, the Canadian authorities would prefer, as an innocent measure designed strictly to stave off further unemployment.

ON SECURITY COUNCIL—U.S.

Put China in Seat!

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States proposed today the permanent seat on the UN Security Council be given to Communist China.

The proposal was put forward by U.S. Ambassador George Bush at a meeting attended by more than 30 delegations friendly to Nationalist China.

Bush presented an amended draft resolution on the China issue which would give UN membership to both the Chinese Communists and the Nationalist Chinese with the security council seat now held by the Nationalists going to the Communists instead.

The U.S. revised the draft of the resolution after a number of Taiwan's staunchest supporters requested the change. The resolution goes to the assembly early next week.

After the meeting Bush expressed confidence that the U.S. policy for a dual Chinese representation in the UN is on the way to success.

"I have a distinct feeling that there is a forward motion," he said.

Diplomatic sources said the U.S. action was taken to get the support of Japan which has great prestige in Asia.

NEWS BRIEFS

Debate Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — Approval was given in the Commons today for a special debate on the government's refusal to make payments to the Canadian wheat board under legislation still in force. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said the special debate could be held this evening. Formal impeachment notice was filed today against three cabinet ministers.

49 Killed

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — A Soviet-made TU134 passenger plane of the Hungarian Airline crashed today near Kiev, in the Soviet Union, killing all 49 persons aboard, the Hungarian news agency MTI said. MTI said it had no further details.

Policeman Injured

BELFAST (AP) — British troops clashed early today with rioters protesting Northern Ireland's clampdown on the Irish Republican Army. Bombs exploded in scattered sectors of Belfast, an electricity pylon was blown up near Omagh and another blast of gelignite shattered the front of a police station at Lisburn.

Deadly Attack

SAIGON (Reuter) — Fifteen persons were killed and 57 injured by a bomb blast Wednesday night at a fashionable nightclub in what appeared to be the most deadly terrorist attack in Saigon for more than six years.

New Pill Found

ROME (Reuter) — A team of Italian scientists said today it has reached an advanced stage of research with a new contraceptive pill. The pill would prevent fertilization without preventing ovulation as pills now in use do.

NO WELFARE FOR UNDER-19s

VANCOUVER (CP) — City welfare director Walter Boyd has cut off social assistance payments to most persons under the age of 19, charging that many young applicants simply want to "shack up, blow grass and generally dig the scene at taxpayer expense."

Boyd took the action through a directive to the city welfare staff to remove all 16- and 17-year-olds and most 18-year-olds from the assistance rolls. He said about 250 persons are affected.

Foods Lead Index Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — The largest mid-summer increase in food prices in more than a decade occurred last month, putting food prices three per cent higher than they were before last fall's supermarket price war, Statistics Canada reported today.

This was by far the largest factor in sending the consumer price index up to a record 135 from 134.1 in July and 130.5 in August last year, based on 1961 prices equalling 100.

In dollar terms, it meant that last year's food bill of $13.19 cost $13.59 in August this year, 26 cents more than in July. After the supermarkets slashed their prices last fall, the price for a comparable basket of goods dropped to $12.56 in December.

The over-all index last month stood 3.4 per cent higher than a year earlier. This showed an acceleration of the rate of price increases, after it had slowed earlier this year to about two per cent.

It meant, said the statistics bureau, that the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer spending dollar was cut to 74 cents last month. It had been 75 cents in July, and 77 cents in August last year.

CLOTHES CHEAPER

While food prices lead the parade of higher prices last month, they were spread over nearly all segments of the overall index which is generally regarded as a measure of the cost of living. Only clothing prices showed any downward movement, and it was small—two-tenths of one per cent.

But some consumer durables—items that a family buys infrequently, expecting them to last a long time—also showed some price moderation. Included were prices for new cars, furniture and carpets.

In percentage terms, the index was up seven-tenths of one per cent in the past month, and 3.4 per cent in the past year. Economists believe a consumer price increase of more than two per cent a year is inflationary.

FOOD PRICES UP

Food price increases between July and August in the last five years have averaged 1.2 per cent, but this year they jumped by almost twice that. The statistics bureau said almost all foods had higher prices except vegetables.

Last month's food prices were 8.2 per cent higher than

Bogeyman Land Developer 'Is a Mythical Creature'

The bogeyman land developer who inflates land prices through monoplistic deals in B.C. suburbs is a mythical creature only, according to a study released in Victoria today.

Despite land prices that have risen faster than other housing indexes, developers are only taking out of land what people are willing to pay in a healthy land market.

In an interview before presenting his report to the convention, Prof. Stan Hamilton of the University of British Columbia said he found "no artificial price inflation" in land trading in the province's suburban areas, where housing subdividing normally occurs.

"People say they can't afford a house — I say they can't afford a house where they want it," Hamilton said.

The study was sponsored by the UBCM and aided by a grant from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Hamilton co-authored the report with Prof. R. U. Ratcliff. Both men are in NBC's urban land economics division of the faculty of Commerce and Business Administration.

INDIVIDUAL CASES

Hamilton said their study shows there may be individual cases where land is unfairly priced, but the total effect of land dealings does not indicate prices are too high because of monopolistic land holdings by developers.

There are close to twice as many acres of suburban land sold as there are acres subdivided, indicating land is not dribbled out for use at ransom prices by companies with huge holdings, Hamilton said.

"There is almost a total absence of land-banking by developers," he said, but added that people other than developers are holding land. These and the "little old lady" who have been there for 40 years" and include the "farmers who refuses to move out and let new development in."

Ratcliff and Hamilton took samples of land trading in Saanich, Kamloops, Richmond, Surrey and Coquitlam between 1954 and 1970.

There is no doubt, Hamilton said, that land prices have risen faster than the consumer price index, than the cost of construction, the cost of servicing and other indicators. The only aspect of development with faster rising costs is financing of money.

'LAST CENT'

Developers are "extracting the last cent from the public," he said, "but they are doing it in a competative situation."

A formula worked out for the study which traced the long-term trend of land price increases between 1954 and 1970 shows land was inflated at about 7.25 per cent per annum, compounded.

Ratcliff and Hamilton's land cost price index shows land that cost $100 in 1954 cost $306 in 1970.

Hamilton said some people may have expected the study to recommend that municipalities get into the land bank business in order to improve subdividing performance.

Secret Tip: Early Blast

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The protest vessel Greenpeace sailed out of Vancouver harbor Wernesday night, planning to get to Amchitka Island "as soon as possible" because of a telephone tip that the United States Atomic Energy Commission has advanced the date of a nuclear test on the island.

Jim Bohlen, one of 12 persons aboard the 80-foot Canadian halibut boat, would say only that the Washington, D.C., source of the tip was a reliable and sympathetic one.

The Greenpeace, originally scheduled to sail for the Aleutians at noon, moved out just before 11 p.m. because of delays in fuelling and cleanup details.

Crew members plan to protest the five-megaton underground blast by cruising off the island's three-mile territorial limit on the day of the test, some time in October.

BYPASS STOPS

They expect now to bypass planned stops at the British Columbia ports of Comox, Campbell River and Prince Rupert and go directly to the Aleutians.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Wednesday that Washington knows just how "unanimously and strongly" Canada is opposed to the proposed Amchitka nuclear test.

And in Washington, a spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission said today the commission is awaiting a final decison from the White House before a date can be set for the five-megaton nuclear warhead underground test.

GOV'T 'VALET SERVICE'?

If anyone wants to hire a personal valet, the B.C. government will pay half the man's salary.

This is the way Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell described the government's intentions to get people off welfare rolls when he spoke Wednesday to the annual convention of the Union of B.C. municipalities in Victoria.

The program announced earlier this month by Premier Bennett and administered by Campbell, is an attempt to avoid the "mountains of red tape" common to other forms of welfare, Campbell said.

He said he wanted the program to become something "peculiarly made in British Columbia."

A requirement of the plan is that the hired person be on the welfare rolls and Campbell said the government is issuing "certificates of opportunity" to people "if they are eligible for the program."

Campbell said there is no need for confusion about how the plan works. It would be perfectly correct for someone to hire a personal valet and charge the government half the salary.

"The answer is yes if you have an idea for employing people," Campbell stated. "The answer is no if you are expecting a grandiose scheme."

Edith Lashing Lafayette

CAMERON, La. (AP) — Hurricane Edith lashed into the heavily-populated Lafayette and Baton Rouge areas today with 90-mile-an-hour winds, tornadoes and heavy rains.

At least one death was reported.

The storm had struck the shore at virtually deserted Cameron and the winds then were hitting 100 miles an hour as it headed northeastward into Louisiana and toward central Mississippi.

The fatality was reported at Lake Charles where a man was apparently washed overboard.

Tornadoes struck two schools and several residential areas in Baton Rouge.

One teacher suffered a broken rib and seven pupils were cut by glass.

Nearby, the Sherwood Plaza Shopping Centre, in the eastern part of town, was reported destroyed.

Other tornadoes were reported in St. Martin's Parish and Iberia Parish.

The hurricane came ashore 30 miles east of Cameron, near the Rockefeller Wildlife Refuge in swampy rice-growing country. That is about 50 miles from the Texas border.

Nearly all the residents of the Cameron area had fled.

But a small crew of civil defence workers stayed on to ride out the storm in the boarded-up Cameron City Hall.

Computer Predicts Health for 10 Years

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — When Dr. Lewis C. Robbins of Indianapolis gets out his tip sheets and begins figuring the odds of your living another 10 years, you can bet your life he is right.

Dr. Robbins, his colleagues and their computers are working out a new medical science, called "prospective medicine," which allows them to predict the health of any person for the next 10 years.

The insurance companies have been doing it for years about the death of any person, he told about 500 doctors at a meeting of the College of Family Physicians Wednesday. They can accurately predict the odds on most people living to collect that life insurance.

But Dr. Robbins, head of a health hazard appraisal unit, wants to do it about life and health.

Using statistics carefully collected for about 20 years, he can take a history, supplied by a family doctor, and work out a graphic chart showing what the odds are on your living healthfully for the next 10 years.

He uses a chart, which shows the average life expectancy, and a set of bar graphs showing what might happen to you.

For example, if you are a white male between 40 and 44, and you smoke and drink and don't do any more exercise than an average downtown businessman, your chances of a heart attack in the next 10 years are about double the average.

In fact, you're a longshot in the health race.

However, if you were willing to cut out the smoking, cut down on the drinking and take on an exercise program of, say, walking two miles a day, then your chances of reaching age 54 improve about 10 times. They're even better than half the national average.

Similar to Dr. Robbins' research is another investigation being demonstrated at the college meeting.

Dr. John Merriman of Saskatoon is making physical tests on apparently healthy persons, then drawing up a profile sheet showing how they compare with their ideal selves.

He has even been testing doctors at the college's meeting.

"During the first day of testing," he said in an interview, "we did about 60 doctors and we found two who were showing the first changes for a heart attack in their electrocardiograph."

In Dr. Merriman's tests, the patient has his height, weight and blood pressure recorded and a few questions, including some about smoking, are asked for a history. Then a blood sample is taken and an electrocardiograph done.

The patient then is asked to get on an exercise bicycle and do certain amount of "work."

The electrocardiograph tracing is taken while he is pedalling the bicycle and his blood pressure and pulse rates are recorded.

Dr. Merriman, who is doing his research for the University of Saskatchewan, hasn't compiled the statistics on "his doctors" yet, but it appears that they are no more and no less healthy than the average man, he said.

The four-day meeting, designed to provide a continuing education program for family doctors, ends today.

SENATE ASKS FOR EXAM ANALYSIS

Philosophy Success Rate Amazes Uvic Professor

Members of the University of Victoria Senate Wednesday night questioned why no students of Philosophy 100 were failed last year.

As a result, the senate voted to ask for a report on undergraduate marks and an analysis of examination procedures.

The question was raised by chemistry professor Dr. A. D. Kirk, who quoted figures for last year's classes of Philosophy 100, the introductory course in philosophy.

Kirk said that of 349 students last year, 18 per cent received first class honors, 41.5 per cent second class honors, 36.9 per cent pass, and no students were failed.

The fact no students failed was a "positive amazement" to him, Kirk said, adding that "extreme concern has been expressed to me by colleagues not only in chemistry but also in physics."

"What I'm trying to do is stir the pot a little and get everyone concerned about this," Kirk said. "It's a very serious question."

Philosophy department head Dr. Kenneth Rankin said evaluation of students in the philosophy department is based on marks throughout the year, so that when the end of the year approaches the student has a good idea of his chances of passing. Many drop out if they realize they are failing, he said.

"Dr. Kirk's concern is a reasonable one," Rankin said. "I wonder if he would be willing to support an investigation into examinations."

Rankin said examination procedures vary so much in different departments the rate of students who pass or fail doesn't matter.

Arts and science dean John Climenhaga said it is not so much the pass-fail rate that mattered as it is the proportion of students who receive first and second class honors.

Kirk had earlier expressed concern that students were being treated unfairly in competitions for scholarships if some were given higher marks.

Fine arts dean Peter Garvie agreed and said: "I suspect the root of the problem is the regulations senate has set for grades. It's hard for a department chairman to question the mark an instructor gives."

Uvic administration officials came under attack at the meeting for not allowing a sufficient flow of information on university affairs to get to senate members.

When the time came for the chairman of senate, Uvic president Bruce Partridge, to make his report, Partridge said he had no report. Graduate student senator David Dunsmuir attacked Partridge on the issue, saying month after month no report from the chair is given.

"Giving no report shows disdain for the members of this assembly," Dunsmuir said. "I felt aggrieved, I now feel bitter."

Partridge asked if Dunsmuir proposed action on the matter, to which Dunsmuir said: "I feel the pattern of no reports is slightly unnerving from month to month to month. Something must be happening that the public and senate would like to hear."

Dunsmuir said after the meeting that since he became a senator last October, Partridge has made only two reports in the public segment of the regular monthly meetings. He made three reports in confidential meetings.

"This has to be an ominous development," Dunsmuir said. "There must be things we should know about. Senate is lacking the running commentary on university progress that we used to get with the past chairman (former acting president Robert Wallace)."

At the meeting, Kirk commented that it had been a long time since senate was informed of the activities of the campus planning committee, responsible for construction of buildings on campus.

He said it was often only after the fact that members of senate were informed of developments in university planning.

"These matters should be discussed by senate before being finalized," he said. "Too often we don't find out about these things until it's too late."

It was decided the campus planning committee, chaired by administration vice-president Jack Kyle, would make a report at the next senate meeting and that its terms of reference would be discussed.

Students Say No To Uvic Head

The traditional meeting between first-year students and the University of Victoria president has been cancelled this year because students and faculty voted non-confidence in Bruce Partridge as president last year.

Alma Mater Society Frosh Week co-ordinator Paul Watson said in a letter to Partridge's office "I can only assume that students do not recognize Bruce Partridge as the president of the University of Victoria and therefore it will not be necessary for Bruce Partridge to speak to any frosh assembly."

Watson said today the letter was in response to a telephone request from Partridge's office, asking when the frosh assembly was this year and whether Partridge was to speak at it.

The frosh assembly is traditionally held on Thursday of Frosh Week, which is today.

Earlier this year students and faculty voted overwhelming non-confidence in Partridge as president of Uvic.

In March, the heaviest turnout of voting in AMS history saw more than 70 per cent of 2,775 students who voted call for Partridge's dismissal or resignation.

In April, 59 faculty members supported a motion of confidence in Partridge and 159 voted against it.

Partridge's office would not comment today on the frosh assembly issue. Partridge was not available for comment.

DEMONSTRATORS AT LEGISLATURE

Picketers Protest Mill Shutdowns

Pickets from the Rayonier pulp mill near Squamish paraded quietly in front of the legislature this morning protesting repeated mill shutdowns and exporting of wood chips and logs.

About 20 workers from the shut down mill at Woodfibre, north of Vancouver, supported by representatives from Island mills at Crofton, Harmac and Gold River, are seeking government intervention in what they call "a cold-blooded plan" by Rayonier to wash its hands of any responsibility for employees.

Three-quarters of the 400 employed by the mill have been out of work since the mill was shut down 11 days ago. They have been off work 69 days in a total of five shutdowns since April.

The company has blamed a "soft" pulp market for the closures.

But Reg Ginn, president of Local 3, Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, said none of the 22 other mills in the province has had to shut down anything like as much. The longest any other mill has been shut down over the same period is a month, he said.

NO MONEY

Ginn said Rayonier management claims it has no money to undertake needed maintenance during the shutdowns as the other mills have done keeping many of their men working.

At the same time the company is undertaking a $500 million development in Quebec which will ultimately see three mills built, with an estimated $40 million help from federal and provincial grants.

"We're just asking them to take care of the mills already in existence and treat the people half-decently," said Ginn.

CALLED AWAY

The protesters had a 9 a.m. appointment with Lands Forests and Water Resources Minister Ray Williston but were told he was called suddenly to a meeting in Vancouver.

Ginn said they hope to see Williston and possibly some other cabinet ministers later in the day.

Another problem they want to discuss is shipping wood chips to American mills for processing, a move they say is costing jobs in Canada.

Rayonier is part of a giant international corporation with mills in the northwest U.S. and the logging rights to three-quarters of a million acres of forest in B.C., says the protesters' brief.

They call for International Telephone and Telegraph, the parent company, to be ordered by the province to maintain the Woodfibre community.

Export of logs and wood chips should be unconditionally banned as long as there are inactive mills in B.C. The province should investigate Rayonier's operations "with a view to assuring that the immensely valuable privileges this company has received from the Crown are in fact utilized for the benefit of the people of B.C. and not merely for the further enrichment of a billionaire international conglomerate."

Gov't Action Or Power Lines Will Stay Up

Underground hydro and telephone wiring in B.C.'s municipalities will only come about when the B.C. government orders the change, a study released Wednesday says.

The study, released in Victoria at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention, states the cost of converting to underground wiring would be so high, neither property taxpayers or hydro ratepayers could bear the cost all at once. The report was compiled by a UBCM committee.

A sample of the cost: If only the downtown area of Kamloops were converted, the tax increase to all property owners would be 25 per cent. If only the properties affected were charged for the conversion, their taxes would increase by 135 per cent.

Conversions in other municipalities could raise taxes by up to 41 per cent when all taxpayers foot the bill, and up to 521 per cent when only benefitting properties paid.

These high costs, coupled with B.C. Hydro's policy of refusing to absorb them, convinced the study group that no change will come "until the weight of public opinion causes the provincial government to legislate the desired changes."

The study says it is "of prime importance that municipal councils state their belief that undergrounding of electrical and other utility systems is essential if the public demand for over-all environmental improvement is to be met."

Because the taxpayer or consumer is the "final and common source of funds" for environmental improvement, the study says, the costs involved "should be viewed within the framework of benefits and costs to the community."

The study does say new subdivisions and new communities should and can have underground wiring "within the existing policies of the utility companies concerned."

★ ★ ★

Priority, however, should be given to conversion of wiring in downtown areas.

The study says the costs of converting to underground wiring in 30 downtown blocks of Victoria today would be $7,515,000. The actual cost of the work, done in 1962, is not given.

An estimate of the cost of conversion in the city of Vancouver excluding the university endowment lands is $350,819,000.

"It is evident . . . that other solutions need to be found apart from that of placing huge one-time costs on benefitting properties or one the benefitting municipality," the study says.

It is also "unrealistic" to expect the hydro user to pay for conversion through rate increases. Whereas today's overhead wiring is worth $275 million, a full underground system would cost $1 billion.

MAN STABBED IN FIGHT

Victoria police today are investigating the stabbing of a man in Bastion Square Wednesday night.

Police said when they arrived on the scene shortly after midnight they found Philip Hoen, 20, of 471 Boleskine Rd., had been involved in a fight and was stabbed in the stomach.

He was admitted to the intensive care unit of St. Joseph's Hospital, where a hospital spokesman said today he is in good condition.

Police said Hoen had been drinking with some friends in the beer parlor of the Churchill Hotel, 1140 Government St., and became involved in a fight with another man described as about 28 years, 5 feet 8 inches tall, husky build with fair hair and a goatee beard, who was wearing a red shirt and khaki pants.

This fight was broken up and Hoen left the premises by the front door, when he apparently became involved in a fight in Bastion Square, police said.

The man involved in the second fight was described as having slicked-back hair of fair to dark color, wearing dark-colored pants and "probably blue-colored" shirt. He was described as of husky build and about 5 feet 9 inches tall.

Air Race Winner's $5,000 To Help Fight Drug Abuse

A $5,000 grant to charity from West German flyer-businessman Joachim Blumschein, who won the London-Victoria Centennial '71 air race, will be used to combat drug abuse among young people, Premier Bennett announced today.

Bennett said the provincial and federal governments have contributed matching grants of $5,000. The $15,000 fund will be administered by the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C.

The money will finance a project to be called the Reach Out program. Bennett said the foundation will run the scheme in co-operation with the federal national health and welfare department.

★ ★ ★

Counselling and drug care agencies will be created to assist young people who have become drug users, Bennett said.

Blumschein won the race July 7 by finishing first among 54 contestants who completed the six-stage flight which began in London.

Blumscheins' prizes totalled $60,000, and he also won two trophies. After accepting his awards, Blumschein said he would donate $5,000 of his winnings to any charity selected by Bennett and Prime Minister Trudeau.

Young Lawyer First to Enter Race for N. Saanich Mayoralty

A young lawyer, Paul Grieve, 634 Land's End Road, has begun campaigning for the North Saanich mayoralty.

Encumbent J. B. Cumming, who has served six years as mayor, has made no decision regarding the December election.

Grieve started what he described as an "apolitical" campaign Wednesday morning by mailing information on registration to all local residents. He has not as yet announced his platform.

The lawyer, a two-year resident of North Saanich, has arranged for a commissioner for Oaths to be present at three locations in North Saanich on three separate days to assist prospective voters to register.

Meanwhile, the three North Saanich aldermen whose two years' terms of office end in December say it is too early to consider election matters. They are Ald. Nell Horth, Harry Taylor and Trevor Davis.

WE WERE SITTING IN AN aluminum boat on a lake no great remove from the Arctic Circle. The 12-footer crept at trolling speed half a mile off a grimly rockbound shore. Three wire lines slanted into the depths. At the end of each pulsed a monstrous wobbler.

Overhead, the northern sky was more black than grey. It was raining so hard that the fat drops seemed to bounce inches high from the surface.

A thick-bodied lake trout with mottled grey hide lay between two pair of soaked feet. Thunder rumbled and lightning flashed, and I began to recall the warnings delivered by the woman from Maine who had rented us a boat on another lake.

Watch out for squalls, she had said. It can get very rough in a hurry.

Don't fall in. The water is ice-cold. Drowned people's bodies never come up.

Another, nearer lightning flash jagged from a dark cloud. The calm and hardy northerner at the business end of the outboard rig showed no sign of concern, but Win and I traded glances. We and the boat were the highest objects around, and those steel lines cutting the water didn't strike me as the happiest of companions.

Our position, you might say, was not altogether comfortable.

I wondered with more than a touch of longing how the guys on the coast were doing in the best salmon season for many a year. They would be catching springs and pinks, the lucky stiffs. Right now, in a Vancouver Island tideway, someone would be counting the leaps of a bucktail-hooked coho.

But the saltchuck was far distant, and it might be better to think about the cove on that other Northwest Territories lake where I caught my first jackfish.

The boat-woman, until a few months before, had been a librarian in Bangor. She loved books. Mention an author, and from long habit she would classify him by section and shelf.

"Oh yes," she'd say. "Kenneth Roberts . . . He's in section 'R', fiction, third shelf down. One of my favorites."

Her husband, once a Maine resort operator, had traded the woods for a job in public works. But he got fed up with city life, and here they were, summering in a tent and looking after the boats for the man who owned them.

Anyway, she told us, if we wanted jackfish, which were really northern pike and better esteemed by Americans than by northland Canadians, we had only to try the cove around the nearest point.

It was a lovely little bay, cupped by a marshy green shoreline. The sun shone, the sky was blue and the birch trunks glimmered white.

I tied a Victoria-bought Deadly Dick to my spinning line and flipped a cast. There was a slight check — hardly what I'd call a strike — and no resistance until the line was mostly in. Then a fish of about 20 inches thrashed on the surface. Seconds later, I snubbed it alongside and reached to a hip pocket for my pliers.

The jackfish had a flat head, a narrow body and a mean, elongated snoot. We studied each other for a moment, then I turned it loose.

On this larger lake, before the electrical display began and the rain pounded down, I'd connected with my first lake trout. It was a junior member of a species that yields 60-pounders, and on 400 feet of wire line, it had little chance for capers.

Even so, it kicked up a fuss when I winched it to the surface, and though blander than stream trout or salmon, its light-colored meat made good eating. . . .

Right now, praise be, our pilot was asking if we'd like to head in and dry off.

Next day, sunshine returned. Win tagged a laker on light spin-casting gear in a shallow narrows. It became apparent that I'd underrated lake trout potential. The fish peeled line off the reel. It was both strong and tricky, and we came within an ace of losing it when it fouled the line on a snag.

A worthy prize, and the biggest of the trip.

From laziness which I now regret, we missed out on a hike-and-portage expedition that paid off in Arctic grayling. The violent sheen had faded from the sides of these swift-water battlers when I looked them over.

But lift a long, high dorsal fin, and a hint of color remained. Enough to furnish some notion of how the bearer of that proud banner must have looked when it arched from its pool below a northern rapid.

Roberts Cools Dodgers But Giants Lose Again

BILL WALKER

For a few years after the war, the man who mattered finally for Victoria United of the Pacific Coast Soccer League, was Bill McAllister. He was the Barry Sadler of his day, a dedicated sportsman, an advocate of fair play, and in the vernacular of the time "a nice guy."

Well, Bill is back. He has been for all of a year now. And if he's one of the first officers the new recruits at Royal Roads get to know real well, real soon, he could also be the chap they will learn to dislike, immensely, on Oct. 8.

It all has something to do with the sports program at the military college, and tradition. And Bill is in charge of both, in this case.

Bill is the director of athletics at Royal Roads, and naturally feels the school provides an excellent program. "We are very sports minded," he explained at lunch this week. Which in terms of the military means that every recruit, and cadet (yes, there is a difference) gets into the act, and no athletic talent will be kept hidden for long. And there will be no reluctance on the part of the recruit to participate, either.

As Bill added: "Much of the program is compulsory."

●

Classes don't acutally start until next month, the college commandant, Bob Peers, explained. "We bring in the recruits a month early, for medicals, and various things. Our program is designed that way. We lose a few on medicals; then the others have a chance to decide if they want to stay on; if they feel they aren't suited for service life, they may leave."

The actual pre-course buildup, among other sundries, takes the form of a concentrated conditioning program.

"It's mainly cross-country running," said Ed Jay. "This is one of our major sports."

"Besides, we have a very interesting course within the grounds," he added, "with a few hills!"

Wrestling is very popular," McAllister pointed out. "And in good hands," he added of coach Ed Ashmore, who lists among his credentials the fact that he was coach of Canada's team at the Pan-Pacific Games in Tokyo. Maurice Lancaster, former Victoria Rugby Union official, is in charge of his favorite sport; Jim Bain is coach of the volleyball team, and Barry Windfield, a Canadian national team member, will handle the intriguing fortunes of the water polo team.

"Is water polo really that mean?" asked an inquiring reporter.

●

"Let's say it allows for much individual expression," said Windfield, explaining that what goes on under the water is often more interesting than what occurs on top.

There are several other sporting outlets available — swimming, sailing, soccer, basketball, plus recreational diversions such as golf, or even fishing. The latter actually is the CO's bag. His advice is interesting, too.

"Fishing has been pretty good," admitted Peers. "I've found that a little piece of red plastic paper, like you find in a bread wrapper, and placed just in front of the strip, or minnow, will usually do the trick."

How did you do this morning? someone asked. "I got skunked," was the dour reply. "Couldn't keep grilse off the lines."

Meanwhile, the madatory part of the program goes on, relentlessly, or as Vice-Commandant Gary Whitten suggested:

"Do come back for the Recruit Obstacle Race. It's on Friday, Oct. 8."

"I think you will enjoy it," Peers smiled. "We do."

●

There was the merest hint of a sadistic gleam in the eyes of those present.

The recruit obstacle race? Hmm. Sounds like the old torture-chamber trick—greased logs, deep pits, barbed wire . . .

"It's sort of the defining line between 'recruits' and 'cadets.' This is where the recruit proves himself," explained McAllister. It's the only way he can be accepted by the rest of the wing."

Does it have anything to do with the academic process of improving the mind. . . .?

The question went unanswered.

"What the weather doesn't do for us between now and then — we're looking for rain, and lot's of it — hopefully we'll get the Colwood Fire Department to do," said Peers.

The implication was obvious.

"Yeh, hoses and all," suggested another. "As it is now, they'll be under water for half the course anyway."

Mostly fact or some fancy?

Nobody was telling. Not even Bill. Something called tradition didn't permit it.

Oakland Captures Title; Pirates Down Cards

By The Associated Press

There won't be any playoff or World Series money for San Diego's Dave Roberts but the Padres' tough lefthander looms as a big man in the National League West pennant race.

Roberts pitched San Diego a 2-1 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night, keeping the Dodgers a game back of the West-leading San Francisco Giants, who lost 4-2 to Cincinnati Reds.

And he did it a day ahead of schedule.

Manager Preston Gomez moved Roberts up a day in his pitching rotation so that his ace lefty will be able to pitch twice in the six games the Padres have left with the Giants.

Roberts' record is only 13-15 but it's with a club that has a 56-93 mark—and his 1.92 earned-run average is second only to New York's Tom Seaver among NL starters.

While the West race remained unchanged, Pittsburgh Pirates took a big step toward the East flag by beating St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 and opening up an 8½-game bulge over the second-place Cardinals.

In the American League, Oakland Athletics did the expected — they won the West division championship. The A's split a double header with Chicago White Sox, winning 3-2, and losing 7-3. Meanwhile, Kansas City Royals dropped out of contention by losing a 6-2 decision to California Angels.

Sal Bando hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning of the first game to give the A's the edge they needed.

Win Streak Snapped at Eight

"It's no disgrace losing to a guy like him," Los Angeles manager Walt Alston said after Roberts scattered eight hits and pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the third inning to snap the Dodgers' winning streak at eight games.

The Padres, beating the Dodgers for only the fourth time in 17 meetings, took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Leron Lee and Larry Stahl singled and Lee scored when pitcher Don Sutton threw wild after fielding a bunt.

Stahl homered in the sixth after the Dodgers had tied it in the second on Sutton's RBI infield single.

Pete Rose's run-scoring triple and Lee May's RBI single in the fifth snapped a 1-1 tie and sent the Giants to their third straight loss and 10th in 11 games. The Reds' Jim McGlothlin held the stumbling Giants to six hits, including homers by Willie McCovey and Dick Dietz.

Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago Cubs swept New York Mets 6-2 and 3-2, Atlanta Braves topped Houston Astros 4-2 and Montreal Expos edged Philadelphia Phillies 1-0.

Pittsburgh's Dock Ellis, pitching for the first time in two weeks because of elbow trouble, worked seven innings to run his record to 19-7. Most of his offensive help came in the fourth on Dave Cash's RBI single and Al Oliver's two-run homer.

Aaron Hits 44th Home Run

Hank Aaron's 14th homer in the last 24 games—his 44th of the season and 636th of his career—and Phil Niekro's four-hit pitching highlighted Atlanta's victory over Houston.

Montreal's victory came on the four-hit pitching of Ernie McAnally and Bobby Wine's sacrifice fly following a three-base error by Philadelphia second-baseman Denny Doyle in the eighth inning. The Phillies' Woody Fryman pitched a six-hitter.

In other American League games, New York Yankees defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-2, Boston Red Sox edged Cleveland Indians 6-5, Detroit Tigers topped Washington Senators 4-2 and Minnesota Twins edged Milwaukee Brewers 1-0.

Denny McLain, a 31-game winner with Detroit in 1968, became the majors' first 20-game loser this season in the Senators' loss to Detroit. Bobby Murcer of New York snapped a seventh-inning tie against Baltimore with his 24th home run of the year. Ron Swoboda wrapped up the Yankee win with a two-run single in the ninth.

But Phillies' second-baseman Don Money (left) grabbed "on-money" throw and put out Hunt in seventh inning of game which Montreal won, 1-0. Backing up Money is Philadelphia shortstop Larry Bowa (10). Jim's Party A Real Bash For Stamps!

CALGARY (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers threw a party for coach Jim Spavital's 45th birthday Wednesday night—but Calgary Stampeders did the celebrating.

The Bombers blew their chances with six interceptions and injured quarterback Jerry Keeling, who came off the Calgary bench early in the second quarter, took advantage of the miscues for a 20-7 victory which extended the Stampeders' first-place margin to eight points.

Keeling, a right-handed thrower, was expected to be used sparingly because of a heavily-padded left hand covering jammed fingers and stretched tendons. But the 11-year veteran took over with Calgary trailing 7-0 when rookie Jim Lindsey ran into trouble against a determined Winnipeg defence, headed by middle linebacker Mickey Doyle.

Place-kicker Larry Robinson started the Stampeders, now with an 8-1 record, on the comeback trail when he recovered a fumble by Paul Markle on Winnipeg's 33, a few plays after Keeling started.

LINTERMAN SCORES

Two plays later, Keeling combined with halfback Rudy Linterman on a 33-yard pass-and run play for Calgary's first touchdown.

Fullback Hugh McKinnis got the other Calgary touchdown on a two-yard plunge, also in the second quarter when the Stampeders scored 16 unanswered points.

Robinson, who caught the interceptions given up by Winnipeg quarterback Don Jonas, added two converts and a pair of singles off wide field goal attempts.

The remaining Calgary points came on two safeties, given up by Winnipeg punter Jim Thorpe with the Bombers hemmed in their half of the field.

The Bombers, winless in Calgary since the 1965 playoffs, got six points when Ed Williams sprinted up the middle on a 30-yard run. Jonas converted.

SURPRISED FANS

Calgary coach Jim Duncan surprised all when he inserted Keeling into the lineup.

"I knew he was going to play . . . I just wanted to wait for the right moment. . . . He looked great during the pregame warmup and was throwing the ball with authority."

Cents' Splurge Drops Bruins In Rough Tilt

VULCAN, Alta. (CP) — Calgary Centennials scored four unanswered goals in the third period for a 5-1 victory over New Westminster Bruins in a Western Canada Hockey League exhibition game Wednesday.

Rookie Brian Molvik scored the winning goal in the final period. Ron Homenuke, John Senkpiel, rookie Danny Gare and Len Chalmbers got the other goals for the Centennials, who trailed 1-0 after the first perior. Teams were tied 1-1 at the end of the second.

The game was called by referee Woody Swallow of Calgary with less than three minutes remaining when coach Ernie McLean of New Westminster refused to send a player to the penalty box after the Bruins' Bob Stumpf took a spearing major and game misconduct.

Earlier in the third period, Neil Godlien of New Westminster and Homenuke each received majors and game misconducts for their part in a fight. During the brawl, Les Jackson and Barry Smith of New Westminster and Jim Watson and Doug Horbul of Calgary were assessed game misconducts.

Naysmith Wins Low Gross Title

COURTENAY — Shirley Naysmith of Victoria and Wyn French of Comox collected top honors at the 10th annual Tilliocum women's tournament at Sunnydale Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Naysmith won the Corby Trophy for low gross while the Ingram Trophy for low net went to Mrs. French.

Trudie Newman of Campbell River was low gross runner-up while Margaret Morris of Comox placed second in the net category.

Jean Lusney, Marg Hart, Mrs. French and Mrs. Morris won the team title for Comox.

Trull Latest to Go As Esks Clean House

EDMONTON (CP) — Coach Ray Jauch is cleaning house and Edmonton Eskimos will have a bunch of new faces in the lineup when they meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in a Western Football Conference game Saturday night.

Jauch's latest move to get Eskimos on the winning track came Wednesday with the release of quarterback Don Trull, who was unable to snap Edmonton out of a losing habit in his second WFC season.

Tuesday, Jauch released defensive halfback Ted Page, offensive halfback Al Namanny and offensive lineman Keith Christiansen.

Jauch gave up on Trull and the others after the Eskimos stumbled to their eighth defeat in nine games.

Jauch's bid to reverse Eskimo fortunes includes wide-receiver Bobby Taylor, obtained from Hamilton Tiger-Cats. He also picked up Gene Moore from Hamilton, in exchange for "future considerations."

Also in camp are Canadian running back Greg Thompson, linebacker Tim Kelly, defensive-back Dave Walker, offensive lineman Chip Kell and wide-receiver John Embree. Jauch said others players are on the way.

Larry Lawrence survived Jauch's axe-job and will remain the No. 1 quarterback, backed up by newcomer Bruce Lemmerman.

Patriots Collect End

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England Patriots of National Football League have picked up defensive end Art May on waivers from Cincinnati Bengals. May, 22, is from Tuskegee College and was the fifth round-draft pick of the Bengals.

Opinions Differ On Parent's Pact

TORONTO (CP) — It may take a Philadelphia lawyer to solve the dispute between Toronto Maple Leafs and goaltender Bernie Parent.

Howard Casper of Philadelphia says his client has no contract with the National Hockey League club, although Leafs' general manager Jim Gregory and NHL president Clarence Campbell disagree.

Parent has been absent from training camp since it opened six days ago.

Parent was on the second year of a three-year contract when he was traded to Toronto by Philadelphia Flyers last season.

"In my opinion he does not have a third year of a contract," Casper said Wednesday night. "We feel the contract has been rescinded."

"I can't say why it has been rescinded. Certain confidences can't be revealed."

Casper may have formed this opinion from a promise Leafs made to Parent last season to offer him a new contract this year.

CAMPBELL DISAGREES

Casper's viewpoint that Parent is not on an existing contract is described by the NHL president as "a piece of nonsense."

Parent's lawyer says the goalie will accept either a one or two-year contract.

"We are more than willing to take a two-year contract, but not on Gregory's terms," Casper said.

Casper claims the problem is over money.

Campbell outlined the situation by telephone from Montreal Wednesday night.

"When Parent was traded to the Leafs he indicated his desire to have an improved contract. The Toronto club offered to accommodate him. They made an offer and he said he'd think it over.

"And he's been thinking it over ever since. Now his lawyer makes the position that this means he is not on an existing contract. Which is a piece of nonsense."

Farmer Players Sweep Honors

Playoff-champion Farmer Construction dominated most of the individual honors in statistics released Wednesday by the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League.

Greaves Movers, who topped action in the regular season, led only in the base-stealing department.

Gord Strongman of Farmers led hitters with a .371 average, 57 percentage points better than runner-up Walt Burrows of Al's Home Service.

Mike McAvoy and Barry Harvey of Farmers shared the runs-batted-in crown with 16 each.

Farmers' Bob Mabee pitched the most wins, 10 in 15 decisions; had the most strikeouts, 112; and hurled the most innings, 88 1-3. George Brice of Gorge compiled the leading earned-run average (1.71).

John Yankoski of Greaves ran up the most steals with 10, two more than the total recorded by Doug Hill of Gorge.

Awards will be presented during the annual windup banquet and dance Friday night at the Playland Curling Club.

BRONCO ACE STAYS HOME . . . . . . HUCUL RELEASES 16

Affleck Declines Offer to Join Cougars

A 17-year-old Penticton defenceman, Bruce Affleck, has declined an invitation from Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League to attend training camp for the 1971-72 season.

Affleck, regarded as one of the hottest junior prospects in Western Canada, told Cougars' general manager Eric Bishop that he intends to play another season with the Penticton Broncos.

The six-foot-two, 215-pound Affleck had been under pressure from Bishop for the last month to join the Victoria team, and Cougars' coach Fred Hucul talked with him and his family for about four hours last week.

Bishop expressed disappointment at Affleck's decision to remain with Penticton.

"He won't learn anything there," Bishop said. "Nobody will hit him, and when they get into an inter-provincial playoff, he'll wonder why, all of a sudden, they're hitting him."

Bishop said he is also unhappy over recent developments between the Broncos and Cougars in which a working agreement has been ignored.

"I'm putting thousands of dollars and players into Penticton," he stressed. "When I want players, I've been turned down. It's got to be a two-way street."

Bishop said he believes some of the new owners, who recently bought the Broncos, are counselling players to remain in Penticton.

Bishop left this morning to talk with Dr. Arnold Lowden, president of the BCJHL, who is one of a new group of Penticton owners.

Hucul, meanwhile, made 16 cuts at training camp here Wednesday but still has 104 players working out. Training camp has been divided into two sections with 49 players now fighting for berths with the Cougars, and 55 trying for the Victoria Junior Cubs, the Cougars' affiliate in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Cougars practice twice daily at Memorial Arena. An inter-squad game will be played there at 7 p.m. Sunday.

From Victoria: "I have dressings for some 200 odd steelhead flies and am in the process of tying up a display board. If you have any uncommon, productive flies up your sleeve, I'd like to have the dressings."

In an earlier column I mentioned two recent publications with an excellent selection of Pacific Northwest fly patterns. These two publications, "Pacific Northwest Fly Patterns," ($2.70) by R. Patrick, and "Flies of the Northwest," ($2.00) edited by the Inland Empire Fly Fishing Club, with B.C. representation by the Totem Fly Fishers of Vancouver, contains one of the best selections of the most popular and productive flies used for summer and winter steelhead fishing. Both books are available from Salmon Trout Steelheader Magazine, Dept. C, P.O. Box 02112, Portland, Oregon 97202. Published bi-monthly, Salmont Trout Steelheader magazine also carries a regular column detailing history and dressings of proven steelhead flies.

From Vancouver: "... kindly send me one copy of the undoubtedly excellent map of Campbell River and Buttle Lake areas as mentioned in your esteemed column, Outdoor Scene."

This invaluable access map is published by D. Stastny and J. Boby at 85 Petersen Road, Campbell River and sells for $1.50. For complete information of this northern half of the Island I would also recommend that you send to the Geographic Division, Survey and Mapping Branch, Department of Lands, Forests and Water Resources, Victoria for the following maps: No. 92L — Alert Bay showing the Nimpkish Valley and the whole northern end of the Island; No 92E — Nootka Sound showing the area between Gold River and Zeballos; No. 92K — Bute Inlet showing Campbell River through to Sayward and the Island and mainland east; No. 92F — Alberni showing Nanaimo to Port Alberni and north to Campbell River.

These four maps include the whole northern portion of the Island from Nanaimo to Parksville—Alberni Highway north. Available at $1.50 each they show all major road and topography and are indispensible for planning trips and travel in the area.

From Victoria: "Your column about the Rex Field buzz bomb was most interesting to me. As a beginning fisherman, anything that will increase my catch is most acceptable. There seem to be several sizes and colours of bombs. Would you please tell me which one you were using when you had good luck on the Bar. Maybe Mr. Field has a folder describing the several types and advantages of each."

As mentioned in my column many colours, sizes and combinations of colors are available in the Rex Field buzz bomb. White proved to be the most successful for my style of fishing with this lure and for many other anglers during this past summer. The wide No. 3 or Centennial model was deadly for coho while the No. 3 or pink pearl worked best for chinook.

A set of directions comes with each buzz bomb and as Rex pointed out to me they must be followed closely if the angler is to have success with this lure. The buzz bomb is a lure which can be used with regular tackle but it is also a remarkable new fishing technique which must be practised and perfected. Further information on the buzz bomb can be obtained by writing Mr. Field at 1025 Grieve St., Courtenay, B.C.

Leos Cut White, Activate Newell

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference Wednesday announced the release of lineman Jim White.

The 22-year-old import came to the Lions this year from Colorado State. The six-foot-four, 235-pound rookie was used mainly as a defensive end after a short stretch at tight end.

At the same time the Lions announced that defensive end Pete Newell had been activated following a five-day trial. Newell, six-foot-three and 230 pounds, played last season at the University of Michigan and was drafted fifth by the Detroit Lions of the National Football League.

Quarterback Tom Wilkinson underwent surgery Tuesday night and has been again placed on the club's injury reserve list. He received a torn knee ligament in Sunday's game against Calgary Stampeders.

Head coach Eagle Keys expects to give the starting assignment to rookie quarterback Don Moorhead in this Sunday's game in Winnipeg against the Blue Bombers.

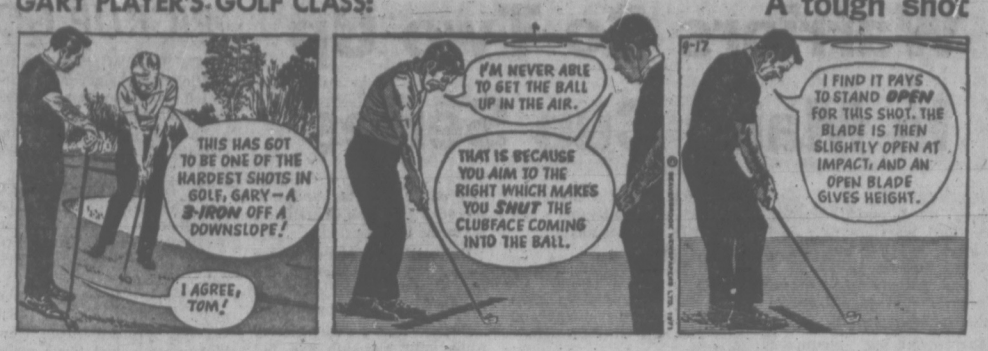
GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: A tough shot



REDSKIN DREAMS . . . . . LAY SHATTERED

NFL Season Resembles Replay

NEW YORK (AP) — With Washington's dreams of glory as broken as Sonny Jurgensen's arm, the Los Angeles roster a patchwork quilt and Detroit's waning strength, 1971 appears likely to prove an instant replay of 1970 in the National Football Conference.

George Allen, who brought a flock of his Rams to Washington and traded away future draft choices to stock the Redskins with proven talent, will be without Jurgensen, his No. 1 weapon, for perhaps half the season, which all but guarantees Dallas Cowboys another Eastern Division championship.

The Rams, under new coach Tommy Prothro from the collegiate ranks at UCLA, have been incopsistent at best—despite a pre-season victory over San Francisco '49ers—and that opens the door to another Western title grab by the '49ers.

And Minnesota—well, the Vikings are, simply, the Vikings standing so deep in talent just about everywhere they should breeze to the Central crown while Detroit's Lions, their only challenger last season, fade into the rest of the pack.

Here's how the races look from here:

Eastern Division: 1. Dallas; 2. St. Louis Cardinals, 3. Washington, 4. Philadelphia Eagles, 5. New York Giants.

Central Division: 1. Minnesota, 2. Detroit, 3. Green Bay Packers, 4. Chicago Bears.

Western Division: 1. San Francisco, 2. Los Angeles, 3. Atlanta Falcons, 4. New Orleans Saints.

WON'T LOOK BACK

Give Craig Morton or Roger Staubach the ball for the Cowboys and, with the wealth of talent they'll be quarterbacking and the lack of talent they'll be facing most of the year, Dallas shouldn't even have to look back.

St. Louis, whose inconsistent offence fell on its face through the final month of the 1970 season, will again fall short although new coach Bob Hollway could bring a steadiness to the Cardinals.

Jurgensen will likely come passing to the rescue for the Redskins, not in time to make the revamped club a serious threat but early enough to keep them away from the cellar battle Philadelphia and New York are expected to wage.

The Eagles, who failed to win a pre-season game a year ago and continued ailing most the way in regular play, have pulled a reverse in this season's exhibitions while the Giants have hit the skids—and that's how the bottom of the Eastern pack should finish.

The Vikings' staunch offensive line will have Norm Snead as well as Gary Cuozzo well protected and will again be opening gaping holes for the thundering running game that will have Minnesota rumbling away early.

A porous pass defence and an inconsistent running game will probably keep Detroit well out of solid contention but the Lions are still a long way from falling into the basement scuffle between Green Bay and Chicago.

HAVE BETTER BALANCE

The Packers, with old Zeke Bratowski and young Scott Hunter vying for the quarterback slot in place of injured Bart Starr, won't be scoring much—but at least they'll have a bit more balance than the Bears.

The '49ers are so well-stocked in talent that they'll probably go with a virtually unchanged squad—unchanged except for maturity. John Brodie will once again be bringing it altogether.

It could take quite a few games for the Rams to put their game together and they'll have some trouble keeping ahead of Atlanta's defence-minded Falcons. It'll take more than New Orleans' No. 1 pick, flashy quarterback Archie Manning, a spate of rookies and coach J. D. Roberts starting his first NFL season, to get the Saints going this season.

Bozak Sparks Cowichan Win

Cowichan quarterback Kim Bozak threw three touchdown passes and scored one himself Wednesday night to lead the Chiefs to a 39-0 Vancouver Island Bantam Football League victory over Knights of Columbus at Royal Athletic Park.

Chiefs tight end Mike Jones caught two of Bozak's passes for majors and ran for one more. Jones also kicked a single to lead Cowichan scoring with 19 points.

Jim McAuley combined with Bozak for a pass-and-run scoring play and booted a convert. Ralph Fraser romped for another Cowichan touchdown, converted by Doug Wilson.

U.S. Strength Returns After 16-Year Wait

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., a towering army private with a big serve, and veteran campaigner Billie Jean King smashed their way to singles titles in the United States Open tennis championships Wednesday for the first American sweep in 16 years.

Smith, runner-up to Australian John Newcombe at Wimbledon this year, burst the bubble of giant-killer Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, taking the final, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-6.

Mrs. King, three times a Wimbledon champion but winner here only once before — in 1967 — won over her former doubles partner, Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, 6-4, 7-6.

CLINCHING SMASH

Mrs. King clinched the match with an overhead smash, winning the tie-breaker in the second set, 5-2.

Smith, an independent professional serving military duty at Fort McNair, Va., collected $20,000, a purse which he said he will hand over to the U.S Lawn Tennis Association's Davis Cup fund.

Kodes collected $7,500 and he said he's keeping it.

Asked if he would turn over his winnings to the Czech tennis association, he said: "My government doesn't pay my expenses, so why should they take my money?"

Mrs. King's winning purse is $5,000, plus $2,500 expense money, while Miss Casals collected $2,500, plus expenses. Both champions receive new cars.

UPSET HIGH SEEDS

Kodes, who eliminated top-seeded Newcombe in the first round and got past third-seeded Arthur Ashe in the semi-finals, was seeking to become the first East European to win this 90-year-old championship.

One of the world's top-rated clay court players, winner of the French Open at Paris the last two years and runner-up to Rod Laver in the Italian Open in Rome, the 25-year-old Czech acknowledged that he was lucky to go as far as he did.

"I only wanted to win one set off Newcombe so I would not be embarrassed," he said. "I do not play well on grass. Tennis on grass is a joke."

SERVICE BREAKS

In the first set, Kodes returned well against Smith's cannonball serves, gaining two service breaks, one at love.

Then, with Smith varying the pace more, the Czech's game collapsed and he fell into a rash of double faults and errors on easy shots.

Smith himself wasn't in top form either. He dropped his serve five times and was casual and loose with his volleying.

BURNABY TRAILS 2-0 AFTER LATE FADEOUT

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Windsor Warlocks scored four unanswered goals in the third period to defeat Burnaby Kokanees 11-9 Wednesday and take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Canadian senior "B" lacrosse finals.

The Warlocks, who are defending Canadian champions, won easily in the series opener, 21-10, but trailed 9-5 midway in the second period of Wednesday's game.

Medo Martinello scored three goals and Brian Thompson and Joe Krasnaj two each for Windsor. Vern Baker had three goals and Rick Little two for Burnaby.

Warriors Go Two Up In Mann Cup Series

BRANTFORD (CP) — A strong third period boosted Brantford Warriors to a 10-6 victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Mann Cup Canadian lacrosse final Wednesday night.

The defending champion Salmonbellies get a chance to get back into contention when the series resumes tonight.

LEAD ATTACK

Leading the Brantford attack were Rick Dudley, Brian Wilson, Gaylord Powless and Ron MacNeil with two goals each.

Gord Thompson and John McKenna added the others.

Ed Goss paced the Salmonbellies with three goals. Playing coach Paul Parnell tallied twice and Mac Tyler fired the other marker.

Both goaltenders shone as Warrior Bob McCready stopped 28 shots, 23 of them in the first two periods.

Les Norman in the New Westminster nets kept the score respectable as he blocked 40 shots — 17 of the saves coming in the fanal 20 minutes as the Warriors put on the pressure.

The teams were tied 3-3 at the end of the first period before the Warriors took command to hold a 7-5 edge at the end of 40 minutes and outscored the British Columbians 3-1 in the third period.

Unlike the first game of the series Monday which Brantford won 15-4, the Warriors did not dominate the game.

Brantford coach Morley Kells said his club had not played its best and one reason was the improved showing by New Westminster.

PICKUP GOALIE SPARKS RICHMOND

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Richmond Roadrunners defeated Peterborough PCOS 18-6 Wednesday night to take a 2-0 lead in the Minto Cup Canadian junior lacrosse final.

The British Columbia team won the first game of the best-of-seven series 16-14 in overtime Monday. The third game will be played here Friday.

Dave Durante scored five goals for the winners. Walt Weaver, a pickup from New Westminster, had three goals and two assists, Bob Tasker had three goals and one assist, team captain Gary Bregani notched two goals and five assists, and Dave Tasker counted one goal and six assists.

Other Richmond goals came from Tom Penway, Larry Dean, Dave Taylor, and Ron Pinder.

Richmond led 4-3 after the first period, although outplayed by the Peterborough team. Saved by the goal-tending of Ted Gernaey, picked up from Burnaby, the Roadrunners came out of the first period and then went on to run up a six-goal lead in the second.

Richmond coach Rob Phillips gave all the credit to Gernaey, saying "Ted completely frustrated Peterborough."

"They were so demoralized after watching their best shots stopped that they completely fell apart in the second and third periods."

Gernaey had to stop only 27 shots in the game, but 15 of those came in the first period. Peterborough goalie Greg Thomas stopped 39 shots but was not effective on long bounce shots.

Vachon's 'New Attitude' Shows in Canadien Camp

MONTREAL (CP) — Rogatien Vachon does not really believe he is Montreal Canadiens' No. 2 goaltender, but still he tries harder to make sure he gets a regular shot at playing for the National Hockey League team.

Last year, the 26-year-old netminder was replaced by Ken Dryden near the end of the season and watched from the bench as the Canadiens won the Stanley Cup Championship.

"I hope to play at least half the games this season because I know I am going to be ready," he said after chalking up the first shutout of the Canadiens' training camp Tuesday.

Vachon says he came to camp with a new attitude.

"Last season I had a bad camp and a bad start and didn't really play well until a good stretch after Christmas. This time I intend to train well, improve every day and be ready to start the season.

"The best lesson I learned last year is that you have to be working all the time in games and practices. You can't relax. It's not like because you are in the league, you've got it made."

IN BETTER SHAPE

Vachon, already at his playing weight of 161, claims to be in better shape than ever before in his fifth year with Canadiens.

Coach Scotty Bowman is happy with Vachon's work in the camp so far.

"Vachon is a proven NHL goalie and I'm not selling him short," he said. "And I'm not surprised that he's having a fine training camp.

"I told Roggie before training camp started that I don't have numbers for the goalies. If he wants to consider himself No. 2 that's his affair."

"Just how many games the goalies split will depend of course on how the team is going," Bowman added. "I know one thing about Rogatien Vachon. He has always been the kind of goaltender who wants to play."

LIKES LEFLEY

Bowman has been pleased with the work of holdover Canadiens and some of the top prospects. The coach was most impressed by the work of Chuck Lefley, the former Canada national team centre who scored 16 goals and had 19 assists with Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League before being injured last season.

The Canadiens have two more days of work at the Forum before starting their exhibition schedule.

Friday they go to Rouyn-Noranda, Que., for afternoon and evening intra-squad games and return to play Boston Bruins Saturday at the Forum.

They will meet the Bruins and the Black Hawks next Monday and Thursday in Halifax.

Danish Side Dents Celtic Reputation

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Glasgow Celtic, European Cup holders in 1967 and runners-up in 1970, were the first soccer giants to have their reputation dented in the year's competition when they lost, 2-1, to Danish amateurs BK 1903 Copenhagen Wednesday night.

Although Celtic should overcome the deficit in the return leg, nothing could diminish the achievement of the Danish team, currently trailing at the bottom of the Danish First Division.

England's Chelsea opened defence of the European Cup Winners Cup in rip-roaring fashion with an 8-0 victory over a Luxembourg village team, Jeunesse Hautcharage. Peter Osgood scored three goals.

Yugoslavia's Red Star Belgrade crushed Hungary's Komlo Banyasz, 7-2, in Cup Winners Cup play. Filipovich scoring four goals.

The three major European soccer competitions got under way Wednesday.

Toronto Voters Holding Answer

TORONTO (CP) — City council voted Wednesday to hold a plebiscite on whether Toronto should have a multi-million-dollar sports stadium.

Council, which voted 13 to 4 for the plebiscite, did not decide when it would be held. It would be held only if a suitable site and other plans were approved.

Tuesday night, Ald. David Rotenberg said Metropolitan Toronto could have a $45-million domed stadium in time for the 1974 Grey Cup football game and the start of the 1975 baseball season.

PROVINCIAL SHUTTLE WINNERS GET RIDE TO OPEN

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Badminton Association announced Wednesday it has reached agreement with a sponsor for the 1972 Canadian Open badminton championships, plus six major provincial open tournaments during the 1971-72 season.

D. Alan Fitzpatrick of Montreal, CBA president, said his organization had reached agreement with Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., for sponsorship of the provincial and national events.

The 1972 Open championship will be held March 30-April 1 at the University of Montreal.

Canadian players will qualify for the Open through the provincial events, scheduled to begin in Vancouver Oct. 23-24. Other major qualifying tournaments are scheduled for Calgary, Oct. 30-31; Winnipeg, Dec. 4-5; Ottawa, Jan. 8-9; Quebec City, Jan. 22-23; and Halifax, Feb. 5-6.

The top three Canadians in each of the five categories — men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles, and mixed doubles — will be eligible for the Canadian open.

To limit the field at a provincial level, Fitzpatrick said qualifying rounds will be held to determine the number of entrants to each.

Commission to Examine Ontario French Beefs

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Education Minister Robert Welch announced today a special commission will re-examine legislation providing for French language education with a view to resolving the complaints of Francophones at Sturgeon Falls, Ont.

The Sturgeon Falls secondary school has been beset by demonstrations since the new term started as French-language students and parents pressed demands for physically separate French- and English-language schools.

Mr. Welch issued a statement after meeting earlier in the week with student representatives and members of the Nipissing board of education.

"Examination of the various facts involved in this situation has led me to believe that there would be benefit in re-examining our general provisions for French language instruction, so that not only the issue in Sturgeon Falls might be resolved but also that problems of this kind might be avoided elsewhere in the future," Mr. Welch said.

He said he is establishing a ministerial commission under Dr. Thomas Symond, president of Trent University in Peterborough, "to make recommendations for the improvement and clarification in the legislation where applicable."

The commission will consider briefs from school boards, interested groups and the general public. It is to report to Mr. Welch in three months.

Mr. Welch said it would appear that "a situation has developed where the education program in the school in Sturgeon Falls is being jeopardized."

Since the government cannot stand by and see the program in any school disrupted, he said he was establishing the commission to review the administration of Bill 141, the act which established French-language secondary education under public boards of education in 1968.

The minister added that pending the outcome of the commission's review, the education department will not give final approval for building plans for schools in which the application of Bill 141 is in question.

Mr. Welch said Bill 141 has been "extremely successful in extending quality of educational opportunity to French-speaking students."

He said more than 60 secondary schools now provide some form of instruction program in the French language with more than 20 providing a complete range of programs.

The controversy started Sept. 7 with several hundred French-speaking students striking the Sturgeon Falls secondary school 20 miles west of North Bay. French-speaking students and parents held a sit-in at the school cafeteria Tuesday night.

Protesters want the school, where about 1,200 of the 1,600 students are French-speaking, turned into a Francophone school. They have asked the Nippissing board of education to seek grants from the provincial government to build a separate school for English-speaking students. The board has refused.

Theatre Ball Will Start Busy Season

A Theatre Arts ball on Oct. 2 will start a busy season rolling for Peninsula Players, the Sidney-based group whose rehearsal hall is an old church on West Saanich Road.

Aptly named The Playpen the former Deep Cove Church is rehearsal hall for the Players' fall production Victoria's House, a mystery-thriller by Fred Carmichael.

Arrangements for the Theatre Arts Costume Ball which, it is hoped, will become an annual affair, are being handled by Vivian Wallace.

Peninsula Players number 30 members but hope for an increase in numbers after their night-school course starting in October.

The 10-session course will be held on Friday nights in North Saanich Junior High School and will feature demonstrations by well-known theatre figures such as Gloria Peyton (Speech), Gina Lefevre (movement) and Jack Trueman (lighting).

Ferry Jumper Not at City Hearing

Immigration officials are "no longer interested" in the case of a 23-year-old San Francisco man seeking political asylum in Canada.

Lawrence Gorman, 23, vaulted over the side of the CP ferry Princess Marguerite off Clover Point on Aug. 22 in a second attempt to enter the country illegally this summer.

But he failed to enter Victoria legally by ferry Tuesday from the U.S. for a hearing scheduled to investigate his immigrant status.

"Unless he arranges to have an appointment made for another hearing, we'll just leave the matter alone," said immigration's Douglas Cook.

After he was pulled aboard a U.S. pleasure cruiser, Corman said he had a 4-F draft exemption and was seeking asylum here as an opponent of the U.S. political system. He said he jumped overboard because "people with cameras were taking pictures of me."

The hearing would have been held immediately after the ship-jumping incident, according to Cook, but the department allowed Corman time to acquire counsel and ordered him back to Seattle.

The man was deported in mid-July from Vancouver after crossing through the woods illegally between Douglas, B.C., and Blaine, Wash. He was charged with evading examination by immigration authorities at that time and this made him ineligible to apply for immigrant status through regular channels.

Service Marks Battle of Britain

Cadets, the Naden band and former members of the Royal Canadian Air Force will take part in a church service and parade Sunday, marking the 31st anniversary of the Battle of Britain.

Following an interdenominational service in Christ Church Cathedral at 3 p.m. the contingent will form up at the Cenotaph on the lawns of the Parliament Buildings.

Taking part will be Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadrons 89, 676 and 744; members of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association and the Air Force Officer's Association.

There will be opening prayers at 3:45 p.m., followed by the laying of wreaths by Lt.-Gov. J. R. Nicholson and others. After the Last Post has sounded there will be a fly-past by CF-101 Voodoo jet interceptors from CFB, Comox.

This will be followed by a march past with Nicholson taking the salute in front of the Empress Hotel.

Leadership Candidate Addresses 40

Only a national Social Credit government can give Canada monetary reform, Dr. James McGillivray of Collingwood, Ont., a candidate for leadership of the federal party, said here Wednesday.

Addressing 40 persons who attended a meeting at Centennial United Church, McGillivray said provincial Socred governments, although they have given good government, cannot put to practice true Socred policy because they can't control the Bank of Canada.

McGillivray, vice-president of the Social Credit Party of Canada, will challenge Real Caouette's leaderssip at a conference in October in Hull, Que.

He said that the federal party needs to attract many more members and should represent a middle group made up of non-union workers, small businessmen, tradesmen and farmers.

Mill Faces Dump Charge

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The federated Co-Operatives Ltd. sawmill at Canoe about 50 miles east of here, has been charged under the Federal Fisheries Act with two counts of pollution.

A spokesman for the department of the environment at the federal fisheries service said Wednesday that the firm is charged on both counts with dumping mill rubbish into Shuswap Lake Sept. 5.

A court appearance for the company is scheduled Sept. 22 in Salmon Arm.

ELUSIVE CAT CAPTURED

SEATTLE (AP) — Garfunkel, the cat from Oshkosh, Wis., who roamed freely through the inside of a giant Boeing 747 eluding mechanics, pilots and stewardesses for nearly 30 days, has been captured.

A cage trap, baited with cat food, ended the grey tiger-striped feline's tour of the jet which had been undergoing maintenance work for nine days at the Boeing company's Paine Field in nearby Everett.

SALINAS, Calif. — Watch out, podner, here come de guntotin' judge. Judge Stanley Lawson, 57, recently pulled his gun during an unruly courtroom appearance of two prison inmates. He carries the old equalizer "for the protection of my staff and myself."

LONDON — Author Graham Greene must have believed he had nine lives when he was 19. He confessed in his autobiography he played Russian roulette and once almost threw himself in front of a speeding subway train. He said his suicidal urge was strong. If he had succeeded, the world would have never been able to read such powerful novels as The Quiet American and The Power and the Glory.

LE HAVRE, France — One good turn doesn't always deserve another, as Serge Gautrot, 24, found out. He liked his fellow felons so much that he sent a paper dart over the prison wall, inviting his buddies to throw a rope across and haul up a basket filled with wine (ah, the French!) and cigarettes. He's back inside.

NEW YORK — Shirley Chisholm, 47, the only black woman in Congress, says she will announce she wants to run for the presidency on New Year's Day and enter at least three primaries.

VERONA, Italy — The Devils, starring Vanessa Redgrave and Oliver Reed, was seized by police. Reason: the film is said to contain pornographic and obscene sequences. Film was directed by Ken Russel.

HAMBURG, Germany — Karl Doenitz, former grand admiral and Hitler's successor for a few days in 1945, celebrated his 80th birthday.

TORONTO — John Bassett, publisher of the Telegram, doesn't want wages at his paper to equal those at The Toronto Star. That's what he told the Council of Toronto Newspaper Unions. As a result, production on press runs slowed down. Three pressmen were fired after they were accused of interfering with production.

MIAMI, Fla. — What would you say a man named Thomas B. Butterfingers does for a living? Right on. The dean of U.S. pickpockets has died, marking the end of an era. He was 79.

Army Guards Proposed for Italian Churches

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Another valuable painting by an early Italian master was stolen today and the head of a parliamentary commission asked that the army be used to stop a wave of art thefts from unguarded churches.

Giuseppe Romanato, head of the House of Deputies commission of fine arts, proposed in Rome that army sentries be used "as an emergency measure" until means can be found to safeguard art in churches scattered around Italy.

His suggestion came after thieves made off overnight with a 16th-century painting worth tens of thousands of dollars. It is variously attributed to Tintoretto, a student of the Renaissance master Titian, and Veronese, another Renaissance master.

The painting of St. Biagio was taken from a little church at Castelnuovo di Teolo near Padua. Less than 24 hours earlier, police had recovered $3.2 million worth of paintings by 15th-century masters stolen from a Venice basilica a week before.

WOULD USE OBJECTORS

Romanato said his proposal would provide a good use for conscientious objectors demanding exemption from Italy's military draft.

One of Titian's priceless paintings was stolen early this month from a church at Pieve di Cadore, Titian's birthplace, which is near here. It is still missing.

The Italian government has estimated that $10 million worth of art works are being stolen in Italy each year. Three thousand pieces of art have been stolen in the first eight months of this year.

Many of the paintings stolen from unguarded churches are so famous that it would be almost impossible to sell them.

Police said this was the case with the missing Titian and with the five painted panels by Giovanni Bellini and Antonio Vivarini which were recovered Wednesday.

Woman Shot

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A woman was shot and killed Wednesday night at a branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Police would release no details of the incident, although witnesses said only one shot was fired. The weapon was thought to be a rifle.

Sooke Opts For 13 Poll Stations

The Sooke school board has decided to keep multiple ballots for school elections and 13 polling stations instead of a suggested six.

The Capital Regional Board had suggested the school board adopt a single package ballot to take care of all school matters in the December election.

The ballots would have contained a section for election of regional board representatives, election of school trustees and money or shool referenda.

The policy to be continued has one ballot for regional board representatives and money referenda and another for school trustees election and school referenda.

The school board decided to keep the 13 polling stations because a reduction to six would have made it harder for many people to vote and would have reduced voting percentage.

The school board is looking for a new name for one of its elementary schools, which will be officially opened Nov. 16 by Education Minister Donald Brothers.

The school is now called Colwood Lake Elementary, which could make it a source of confusion with Colwood Elementary on Sooke Road.

Suggestions for a change are being accepted from all citizens of the district. District officials are looking for a name with historical connotations.

The school is nearly completed but was delayed because of a last minute change in heating plans.

Anti-Abortion Project Set

About 1,000 Vancouver Island members of the Catholic Women's League of Canada plan to take part in "Project 100,000," a national letter appeal to Ottawa condemning further liberalization of abortion.

Organizing the appeal will be the key topic when the league holds its 51st annual national convention Sept. 20-25 in Regina. The Catholic women hope to collect 100,000 letters at headquarters in Ottawa and then mail them to the federal government.

Mrs. W. W. Rogers of 42 South Turner, provincial president for B.C. and the Yukon, will attend the national meeting to represent the almost 5,000 B.C. members.

LOOK NO MORE

NEW YORK (AP) — Look magazine will cease publication with the issue of Oct. 19, it was announced today.

Mounting costs, particularly postal rates, and declining advertising revenue were cited as the reasons by Gardner Cowles, chairman of the board and editor in chief of Cowles Communications, publishers of the magazine.

Cowles said that Look had 28 million readers, and the response to subscription offers and renewals during the first nine months of 1971 was the best in the magazine's history.

"But reader interest and desire for a publication like Look is not enough to insure its survival if advertising volume is insufficient and costs continue to rise," he said in a statement.

OTTAWA 'DISCOVERY' IGNORES U.S.

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The discovery of a virus that is about 100 times smaller than the normal virus and that is thought to cause potato spindle tuber disease could help researchers find the cause of such human maladies as multiple sclerosis, infectious hepatitis, and even some cancers.

Official announcement by the federal agriculture department on such a discovery came here today.

Described by the department as "a scientific breakthrough of possible world-wide significance," the finding was attributed to federal agriculture researches Dr. R. P. Singh and M. C. Clark of Fredericton, N.B.

But an almost identical announcement was made slightly more than a month ago by the US. department of agriculture, something seemingly ignored officially by the Ottawa news release.

The American scientist was identified in the Aug. 13 announcement as agriculture department pathologist Dr. Theodor Diener.

It is perhaps not surprising that not only do the "mini-virus" findings of the two government sound very much alike, but both country's scientists were working on the same potato disease problem.

Dr. Diener called his infectious particle as "viroid" and postulated that similar particles might cause such human diseases as multiple sclerosis, infectious hepatitis and possible some types of cancers.

In recent months, many leading medical scientists have suggested some cancers and other diseases such as multiple sclerosis are caused by viruses of some sort. But there has been a discouraging lack of success in scientifically pinpointing the disease-producing particles.

The existence of virus-like particles as much as 100 times smaller than the particles most scientists have been looking for could provide a reason for the many failures to date.

More important, this most recent discovery of a "viroid" could put many scientists back on the right track and lead to significant findings.

An unusual characteristic of the "mini-virus" is that it has no protective protein coating as does a norami virus. Scientists are curious as to how the "mini-virus" survives in the less than ideal environment of the individual cell it infects.

ONE TEACHER PLUS BIRTH EQUALS BABY

CAIRO (UPI) — Pupils at an elementary school received an impromptu lesson in sex education Tuesday when their teacher gave birth to a baby in a classroom.

Mrs. Mahassen Ali Al Safty went into labor during an arithmetic lesson and gave birth to a boy.

Douglas Hits Abuse

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuter) — Commonwealth delegates were critical of the abuse of the freedom of the individual in some member states during a committee debate at the 17th Commonwealth Parliamentary Association conference in this Malaysian capital today.

T. C. Douglas of Canada hit out at what he described as limitations on personal freedom by the enactment of internal security legislation which permits arrest without charge and detention without trial.

"You cannot save democracy by destroying it," he said with reference to the reasons given by Commonwealth governments for bringing in such repressive legislation.

"It creates an insidious atmosphere where the freedom of the press and freedom of speech became a hypocritical farce," he said.

"No government is wise enough to be trusted with arbitrary powers over human rights and personal freedom," the former New Democratic Party leader said.

Britain's Dame Joan Vickers sounded a warning against increasing invasion of the privacy of the individual through the growth of computerized information, now available to even one's own neighbors if they held an official position, she said.

Even in Britain there now are 70 exceptions to the common law rule that a man's home was inviolable, she added.

FALCON FACES GROUNDING

ABINGDON, England (UPI) — Fred, the Royal Air Force falcon who went absent without leave last week, is back home again.

The mascot of the Falcons' free-fall parachute team was found 100 miles away, perched on a tree.

Said one of the members of the parachute team: "We can't stop his pay — but we might confine him to barracks for a few weeks on a long piece of string."

Hunter Dies

CHETWYND (CP) — George Foster Alle, 16, of Mackenze was killed Monday when a rifle he was carrying accidentally discharged while he was hunting north of here.

Pay Dispute Hits Newspapers

LONDON (Reuter) — A pay dispute hit production of Britain's national newspapers today for the second consecutive day, leaving the country's newsstands short of more than two million copies.

Worst hit was The Daily Mirror. Seven newspapers lost nearly four million copies between them Wednesday.

The losses were caused by printing unions calling meetings during hours when the presses should have been rolling.

One of the chief unions, the National Graphical Association, is demanding the right to conclude pay settlements with individual employers instead of on a nationwide basis. The union refused to accept the management offer of a $2.40-a-week pay increase and demands instead of an increase of five per cent.

UPI Ordered Shut Down

SANTIAGO, Chile (Reuter) — President Salvador Allende ordered the American news agency United Press International Wednesday night to close its offices in Chile.

UPI stories he objected to included a report on secret meetings he was alleged to have had with left-wing leaders during his visits to Ecuador and Colombia at the end of last month.

Singing's Her Life ... From Age of 10

At least since the age of 10, bright-eyed Dorothy Cahill has known exactly what shape she wanted her life to take.

She is 19 now. And though she has followed her natural bent toward a career in singing and entertaining for almost a decade, she is still seeking the way to her particular fulfillment.

Dorothy arrived in Victoria this week to join the Open Space Ensemble cast as the folk singer in their production of Spoon River Anthology.

She sang her first songs in coffee houses around her home city of Boston when she was 10.

At 13 she bought a book of instruction, borrowed her brother's guitar, sat up all night mastering the first positions and came down to breakfast playing a song.

An inn-keeper's daughter at the resort centre of Gloucester, Dorothy used to perform for the guests and sometimes at art galleries where she earned a little money from the artists who felt her presence encouraged attendance.

She began writing her own songs and had her first theatre experience in 1969 in a dramatization of Kurt Vonnegut's Cat's Cradle.

After her Victoria visit which ends following final performances of Spoon River at Langham Court Theatre, Friday and Saturday, Dorothy will take her intuitive musicality, her wholly natural charm and vibrancy and her self-search to Europe.

There the focus of a projected year of travel, of needed detachment from the problems and pressures of her old environment, will be Paris and Belgian song composer, Jacques Brel.

She hopes, she says, to join the richly creative and sublimated musical circle which surrounds him.

Dorothy's specific plans don't go much further than that but in the larger view there is only one image.

It has haunted her for a decade — an habitual presence from which she has no need or desire to escape.

DOROTHY CAHILL

Abduction Nets Killing

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — One man was killed and two FBI agents were wounded today as the agents rescued unharmed a bank president, his wife and two teen-age daughters from a motel where they were held hostage for two days.

Police identified the dead man as Marvin Grissom of McDougal, Ark.

The FBI said T. R. Smith, president of the Concord Banking Co., Concord, Ga., his wife and two daughters were abducted from their home Tuesday. Concord is about 60 miles south of Atlanta.

Police are looking for a second man, who apparently fled during the shooting.

Police said the men apparently were holding the Smith family until a time lock at the bank was opened. It normally is closed Wednesdays.

FBI agents learned that the family had been abducted, and staked out the motel room Wednesday.

A spokesman declined to say how they were tipped.

Agents watched the motel room and early today saw the gunman go onto a balcony and stand there alone. Then they stormed the motel room and rescued the family.

During the shooting, the gunman was killed and two agents were wounded.

SHUNS $25

DES MOINES, Iowa (Reuter) — Inflation has hit the underworld.

A holdup man walked empty-handed out of the Manhattan Hotel after turning down $25 in cash in a drawer.

"It's not worth the effort," he said.

MARLENE SMASHING

LONDON (AP) — Marlene Dietrich was showered with carnations by a star-studded audience at the Theatre Royal in Drury Lane Wednesday night.

She had the throng of rich and celebrated in ecstasies with her songs, her reminiscences, her sheer magic.

Miss Dietrich, queen of the glamorous grandmas, is nearing 70, but her beautiful elegance made the calendar seem all wrong.

"As you take in the very girlish figure and curvy silhouette," says James Green in the London Evening News, "you are left wondering just what kind of honey she must have been at 21. . . ."

"She looked immortal in £4,000 worth of shimmering gown and enveloping white swan coat with flowing train.

LIKE A DREAM

"She could do no wrong. Every song, every gesture or hip-swing was ooh'd and bravo'd."

Mary Kenny, in the London Evening Standard, says:

"Dietrich once again carried it all off like a dream. She paced herself a mite more slowly, more carefully, than when she last performed here five years ago.

"But otherwise the act was almost totally unchanged and as splendid as ever."

The 2,300 audience, who paid up to $120 for their tickets, stood and cheered at the end of the show, a charity affair for the National Association for Mental Health.

The audience included Princess Alexandra.

As the carnations rained down, Miss Dietrich came back through the curtains and sang Falling in Love Again.

Constables Wounded Aiding Girl

MONTREAL (CP- — Police are still searching for a man, six feet two inches tall, weighing about 170 pounds who shot two city constables when they interrupted his attempt to rape a 19-year-old nurse early Wednesday morning.

Constables Roland Thibodeau, 32, and Andre Michaud, 26, were shot in the abdomen after answering a call about "a man beating a woman."

Constable Thibodeau was reported in critical condition in hospital while Constable Michaud had been moved to a ward after an operation.

Police found a man molesting a woman in a driveway, separated the couple, and attempted to handcuff the man.

A scuffle started, Constable Michaud grabbed the man around the neck while the other officer tried to put the handcuffs on, but the suspect reached backwards, grabbed Michaud's revolver from its holster and fired.

After the shooting, the young woman hid in some bushes, and the man, still clutching the constable's gun, jumped into a taxi and headed downtown.

Lack of Space Throws Cowichan Judo Club

NORTH COWICHAN — The Cowichan Judo Club can't keep up with the demand for lessons.

Veteran instructor Max Kiezekamp, 41, the only black belt in the area, said at least 30 youngsters are turned down every season.

The big needs, the instructor said, are larger training facilities and more instructors.

"We can only handle about 30 juniors and the same amount of seniors," said Giezekamp who is also president of the 50-member club.

"It really hurts that each year at this time we have to turn so many kids away. If they have had any lessons before or have a friend who will teach them the fundamentals we try to keep them."

GIEZEKAMP

Judo instruction, conducted in the municipal hall basement, started another 10-month season last week.

Boys and girls receive instruction Mondays and Thursdays.

FAMILY AFFAIR

"All the fees go toward sending competitors to tournaments," Giezekamp said.

Giezekamp, who has instructed 12 years, said he likes to pass on his knowledge on the sport especially when he see the enthusiasm of people like the Stan Sawatzky family of Youbou.

Sawatzky, brown belt, has his four boys, Eric, 12, and Bruce, 11, both green belts, and beginners Tony, 8, and Gene, 7, all take instructions.

PEDESTRIAN KILLED

DUNCAN — John Frank Allison, 63, of 490 Ypres, Duncan, was killed Wednesday evening while crossing the Trans-Canada Highway here.

RCMP said Allison was struck by a car driven by Christopher Hughes, 20, of Wilcuma Lodge, Cherry Point.

Reward Offered To Stop Vandals

DUNCAN — Cowichan School Board has offered a $100 reward for information leading to the conviction of vandals who have committed "senseless acts" at district schools.

Trustess said they are alarmed over the increase of vandalism and urged anyone with information to report to the RCMP.

Two of the more serious incidents were $500 window damage at one small school in one night and $400 damage to the covered play area of another school.

Up to 60 Men Facing Layoff at Paper Mill

COWICHAN — Fifty to 60 men will be laid off Sunday at the Crofton Pulp and Paper Company mill while recovery boiler tubes are repaired.

Industrial relations supervisor Ken Halliday said Wednesday the layoffs will continue until at least Nov. 1.

Newsprint plant employees will not be affected.

One-quarter of the pulp and paper mill has been down since the end of August when management closed the recovery boiler for regular maintenance and repairs. At that time lay-offs were avoided by having the employees either take holidays or cover for other employees taking holidays.

During testing procedures, Halliday said stress cracks were found in tubes in the generating section of the boiler and they must be repaired.

"Our optimitic date for repairs to be completed is Nov. 1," he said.

Jim Warr, manager of BCFP's Cowichan sawmill division at Youbou, said today the shutdown will still not interfere with his plan to resume the graveyard shift Sept. 27. This involves hiring of 75 men. Youbou trucks chips to Crofton.

Seven-Day Telegraph Service

DUNCAN — Council has been advised closure of the CP Telecommunication office here at the end of October will mean Duncan will get better service.

Ald. G. A. Kerr, who had been requested to look into the change, said that instead of having service five days a week it will be available for seven because people can call toll-free to Nanaimo or Vancouver.

"This will mean the service will be better and more efficient," he said.

Pioneer Westholme Farmer Dies in England

DUNCAN — Captain William Gustavus MacIntyre-Cranko, 88, who pioneered a farm in Westholme, died Sept. 5 at Hellingly, Sussex, England.

Captain MacIntyre-Cranko came to the Cowichan Valley in 1908, and started a 93-acre farm at the end of Cranko Road, off Mt. Sicker Road.

After serving in the Imperial Army in the First World War, he returned to Westholme. In 1933 he went to Haynes West End, Bedford, England where he operated a poultry and hatchery business until he retired to Sussex.

The captain was a brother of the Duncan Lodge; member of the B.E.S.L., Anglican Church, Westholme; and Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club.

He is survived by his wife Ethel and sons, William J. (Mac), of Bedford, England; Oliver A., of View Royal, Victoria; Captain Philip H., British Army; and a daughter, Mrs. C. O. (Nancy) Freeman, of San Luis Obispo, California.

MacIntyre-Cranko is also survived by a brother in New Zealand and sisters in Sussex.

A son, Thomas, was killed on active service in 1944.

A very simple test only one color TV can pass:

Most color TV manufacturers offer automatic fine tuning. Including Electrohome. (We call ours "Electrolok.")

But not all automatic fine tuning is totally automatic. Electrolok is.

In fact, Electrolok is the only automatic fine tuning that locks in the best possible picture. Instantly. Every time.

Try this simple test:

Turn the set on, pick a channel, and manually fine tune until you get the crispest, clearest picture possible. Now manually tune it out. Way out. The way a sticky-fingered five-year-old or an inquisitive neighbour might.

Then touch the Electrolok button.

Instantly the picture comes back crisp and clear. And stays that way.

Try it on other color sets with automatic fine tuning, and you may find the set can't catch up to your dial-twisting. Electrolok locks in fine tuning for good every time—and that's the difference.

There's more to Electrohome color TV than Electrolok, however. Electrohome's exclusive and patented automatic color control. We call it Electrotint. It locks color balance in to stay, scene to scene, channel to channel. Every time.

All-electronic slide tuning changes channels with the touch of a finger.

And Deilcraft cabinetry means the set looks beautiful on or off.

But the most startling differences are the automatic ones. Electrolok automatic fine tuning. And Electrotint automatic color control.

Visit an Electrohome dealer and try our automatic tuning test for yourself. It's the only place to try the test.

Because it's the only place with the color TV that will pass the test.

Accompanied to Olds, Alberta for funeral service and interment. HAYWARD'S CHAPEL in charge of arrangements.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

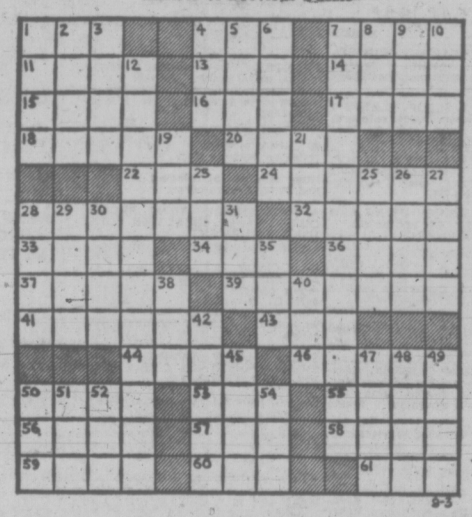
Answer to Previous Puzzle



YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

One of the things I would like to accomplish during my lifetime is to educate people to the idea that many people have a form of epilepsy, but have never had a convulsion. My friend Dr. Frederic Gibbs of Chicago, one of our country's greatest students of epilepsy, tells me that for every epileptic he sees who has a typical electroencephalogram (record of the electric currents constantly running through the brain) of an epileptic and who has seizures, he sees nine epileptics who have an abnormal electroencephalogram but who have never had a seizure. This person may have, instead, a history of terrible fears and horrible nightmares and perhaps an irritable and sometimes explosive temper. I feel it is as important to reach these non-convulsive epileptics as it is to find the perhaps million diabetics who don't know they are diabetic, and are therefore walking around with a disease that may someday seriously injure their eyes or their kidneys.

To show the need for recognizing this type of epilepsy, a while ago a man came to me because he was having spells of fever that had puzzled many doctors. I noticed his irritability, and from his wife I learned that the spells of fever came when he "blew his top." I have found that some seizureless epileptics can have these fever spells, so about October, I gave him an anticonvulsive drug (diphenylhydantoin) to try, and the fever went away. At Christmas time he wrote me a letter full of thankfulness, saying that with the help of the drug, he had not only his spells of fever but he had quadrupled his sales. Why? Because he no longer fought with his customers.

I was very interested in an article by Dr. Bernard H. Smith of the University of Buffalo, on what he calls the "subtle" forms of epilepsy, which he describes as "a strange imaginary taste, sudden intruding thoughts, transient loss of speech, sudden fear, and abdominal distresses." Also he says that his patient have reported "crude visual hallucainations, lights, stars or balls of fire, or a transient loss of a portion of the visual field. The patients also spoke of feelings of abdominal fullness, emptiness, hunger, or 'butterflies,' sudden fears of forebodings, and a lack of memory after a spell."

It is the strange abdominal distresses that brought hundreds of such patients to me, a gastroenterologist (stomach specialist), rather than to a neurologist. In taking a family history, I would learn that the person had a relative, perhaps an uncle, who was epileptic. When I would send the person for an electroencephalogram, a report would come back with the tell-tale "spikes and seizure discharges" of epilepsy. Then with an anticonvulsive drug, the person would lose his symptoms.

It is to be hoped that the time will come when no well-trained physician will start treating a nervous or psychic trouble without first getting electroencephalograms made. I have seen any number of cases in which someone had treated a highly nervous and irritable person with psychotherapy, when what he needed was an anti-convulsive drug. That is like trying to treat a diabetic with psychotherapy rather than with insulin.

Recently, I appeared on the Ted Osborn-in-Depth television show in Chicago with four or five of the citys leading experts on epilepsy and the national director of the National Epilepsy League, Thomas L. Ramsier, who told me about a program available to epileptics as a service of the NEL. Under the plan, the epileptic is able to get all types of epileptic medications at 25 per cent below regular prices. This can be a great help to someone who is taking perhaps four doses of a drug every day and must take it for the rest of his life.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A near new travel trailer with such luxury features as hot water, gas electric fridge, electric toilet, interior heater? We have just purchased a luxurious new Nomad 21½ foot model from Coastline Trailer Annex, 642 Burnside Road, Victoria. Our former trailer a 1970 Scamper 17½ foot has been used just one season and it's had the best of care. Coastline have it priced at only $2,995, which represents a saving of approx. $700. It will make a lovely trailer for some lucky family.

WE RECENTLY TRADED OUR 1965 Citation 12 foot Travel Trailer at Coastline Trailer Centre, 642 Burnside Road, Victoria, on a beautiful new 19½ foot Nomad. Our Citation was fully equipped with fridge, furnace, toilet, stove and oven. TV antenna and electric brakes and it's in immaculate condition. If you are thinking of buying a used trailer drop down to Coastline and see our Citation. It's well worth the asking price of $1695.

VICTORIA SWIM COACH AT MONTREAL CLINIC

Tony Keeler, coach of the Victoria Olympian's Swin Club, has been selected by the Canadian Amateur swim Association (B.C. Section) to attend the inaugral World Swimming Clinic in Montreal, Sept. 13 to Oct. 3.

His travelling expenses, along with those of Monty Holding of Port Alberni Swim Club and three top Vancouver coaches — Deric Snelling, Trevor Cole and Paul Savage — will be paid by the CASA.

Top coaches from England, Russia and the United States will lecture at the clinic. Speakers include Jim Councilman of Indiana and George Haines of Santa Clara, Calif.

Olympians have started practice sessions for the coming season. Workouts start 6 a.m. every day at the Crystal Garden and all former or new swimmers are invited to try out.

Goldsworthy Learns Lesson

WINNIPEG (CP) — Right-winger Bill Goldsworthy of the Minnesota North Stars was taken to hospital for x-rays following a collision with defenceman Doug Mohns during a practice session of the National Hockey League team Wednesday in Winnipeg.

Coach Jack Gordon said the high-scoring forward, who wore a helmet all last season decided he would play without it this year.

"I just dropped the puck, turned around and bang, Goldy had hit the ice. It wasn't so much a check by Mohns but more of Goldsworthy catching his skate in the ice and decking himself."

Goldsworthy suffered nothing more than a sore head and was back for a later session — with his helmet.

Athans, Reid Ski to Finals

BANOLAS, Spain (CP-AP) — George Athans of Kelowna and Kim Reid of Selkirk, Man., were among the one dozen men who advanced Wednesday to the finals of the 12th world water ski slalom championships.

The outstanding individual in the semi-finals, which reduced the competitors to 12 from 30, was Mike Suyderhoud of the United States, the defending champion. He amassed 38 points, three more than Wayne Grimditch of the U.S. Roby Zucchi of Italy was third with 34.5 points.

Athans, 19, leader of the Canadian men's team, placed sixth with 33 points and Reid, 16, was ninth with 30.5.

The championships, with 100 entrants from 25 countries, end Sunday.

Blue Carat A Sparkler

VANCOUVER (CP) — Basil Frazier urged Blue Carat up from third place in the stretch Wednesday night to win the feature race at Exhibition Park before 5138 fans.

The five-year-old bay gelding, owned by W. E. Stable and trained by J. H. Hill, ran the one and one sixteenth mile run on a fast track in 1:46 3-5.

Blue Carat paid $12, $5.10 and $3.80. Four And Score, with James Arnold aboard, paid $4.40 and $3.00.

Buffalo Obtains New Linebacker

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Bills of the National Football League have obtained linebacker Chuck Hurston from Kansas City Chiefs and placed two players on waivers.

Hurston was the Bills' 12th draft choice in 1965, but was obtained by the Chiefs on waivers the same year.

The Bills put middle linebacker Dick Palmer on injured waivers and defensive end Bob Hews on regular waiver. Palmer suffered a fractured right forearm playing against Green Bay last Friday.

Dancers To Hit The Road

Action will be anything but dull this weekend when five busloads of Lower Island "squares" travel to Campbell River.

It's all part of Square Dance Week across Canada Sept. 19-25, with 14 Greater Victoria clubs joining the festivities.

The bus trip is a B.C. Centennial project of the Vancouver Island Square Dance Association and the Victoria and District Caller Teachers' Association.

Leaving with city club members from the B.C. Hydro building early Saturday morning, the Van Isle Caravan will pick up additional association members as it winds its way north.

Short stops will be made for dancing exhibitions at Duncan, Nanaimo, Parksville and Courtenay, according to officials, with a gala celebration at Campbell River topping off the evening. The caravan will return to Victoria on Sunday, stopping again at Nanaimo for an exhibition.

Other scheduled events include a 7 p.m. exhibition dance at Hillside Shopping Centre on Sept. 24 and swing-your-partner afair Sept. 25 at Cadboro Bay United Church hall beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Detroit Unveils Lavish Complex

DETROIT (AP) — Plans for a $126-million domed multi-sport stadium in downtown Detroit has been unveiled by the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

The proposed air-conditioned stadium would seat 60,000 for football, 50,000 to 55,000 for baseball, and 20,000 to 25,000 for arena events. The facility would be built on the Detroit waterfront.

Costs of the stadium itself were estimated at $85 million with the rest of the money going for parking, architects' fees, financing and equipment.

Sabres Sign Ramsey

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League have signed left winger Craig Ramsey, their No. 2 amateur draft choice. Ramsey, 20, played with the Peterboro Petes of the Ontario Junior Hockey League where he scored 30 goals and collected 76 assists last season.

Three Sought As Suspects In Bombing

OTTAWA (CP) — Four young U.S. citizens, all with university backgrounds and camping experience, remain the subjects of a continent-wide manhunt following a fatal bombing at the University of Wisconsin Aug. 24, 1970.

In a bulletin Wednesday, the RCMP offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the four. All are considered armed and dangerous and are charged in the U.S. by the FBI with sabotage, destruction of government property and conspiracy. They have been indicted on six counts, including first degree murder.

They are:

● Karleton Lewis Armstrong, 23, of Madison, Wis. Height 6-2, weight 185 pounds, brown hair and eyes with a receding centre hairline, sometimes has a large beard.

● Leo Frederick Burt, 23, of Darby, Pa. Height 5-11, weight 185 pounds, brown curly hair and hazel eyes. He has a pock marked face and wears glasses.

● Dwight Alan Armstrong, 20, of Madison. Height 5-11, weight 165 pounds, brown hair and eyes. He has mechanical ability and can fly an airplane.

● David Sylvan Fine, 19, of Wilmington, Del. Height 5-5, weight 140 pounds, brown hair and eyes and sharp features.

The RCMP bulletin, a supplement to its "most wanted" list issued last month, says Burt and Fine were last seen at Peterborough, Ont. Sept. 3, 1970. The Armstrong brothers were last seen on the same date near Albany, N.Y.

This week, two Wisconsin lawmen, Sheriff Vernon Leslie of Dane County and police detective Charles Bull, are in Canada searching for the Armstrongs who are named in murder warrants issued after research physicist Robert Rassmacht was killed in the bombing.

CAFE PLANNED

Plans are being drawn for a new Chinese restaurant in the developing Yates-Quadra district of downtown Victoria.

Golden Palace Co. Ltd. has obtained former service station-coffee shop property on the northwest corner of Yates and Quadra for redevelopment this winter, with opening planned for December if plans are approved.

The decision, said company president Kenneth Wong, was influenced by the growth of new office and apartment properties in the neighborhood and the lack of suitable restaurant property in the established Chinatown district.

Wong, a former banker, said the property covers 7,200 square-feet and the proposed building will be planned to accommodate 100 diners.

He said a specialty will be a luncheon menu of Chinese dishes in view of the growth of businesses in the area, with full menu Chinese and Western dishes evenings.

The move could be followed by a second Chinese restaurant, being considered by another company a short distance north of Yates.

Look at Logging vs. Fish

Island Stream Study to Reveal Effect on Salmon, Steelhead

Special to the Times

A team of scientists, foresters and engineers are engaged on Vancouver Island in a study of importance to conservationists and the forest industry of British Columbia.

What — they have set out to determine — are the effects of logging and reforestation on small, coastal salmon and trout streams?

The environmental study is significant for it should provide important information on which to base future multiple use programs for forest lands.

★ ★ ★

The project is being carried out by the Fisheries Research Board and the Fisheries Service (both now under the new department of environment), with the assistance of MacMillan Bloedel.

Site of the study is Carnation Creek, which enters Numukamis Bay about a mile north of the Sarita River, at the ocean end of Alberni Inlet. It was selected as fairly typical of the small coho, chum salmon and steelhead streams found in high-rainfall coastal areas.

Field work began about a year ago, co-ordinated by Dr. Dave Narver of the Fisheries Research Board's biological station in Nanaimo.

★ ★ ★

"There is little scientific information about the impact of current logging and reforestation methods on the productive capacity of salmon and trout streams in British Columbia," says a project summary prepared by Dr. Narver. "Long-term watershed studies, including years before, during and after logging, are required."

The study site is within MacMillan Bloedel's Franklin River logging division. The company had planned to begin harvesting trees in the area in the fall of 1970, but has postponed logging until late 1974 in order to accommodate the long-term study of the stream in its present condition.

Fisheries scientists reach the site over company logging roads and MB also has made available on a part-time basis two foresters, two forest engineers and five logging personnel to assist Dr. Narver's study team.

Dr. Narver lists three main objectives of the board in the area of logging and stream ecology:

● Determine the effect that some logging and forestry practices have on the productive capacity of small salmonid (salmon and trout) nursery streams.

● Determine the value of leaving strips of non-merchantable vegetation along the stream banks. (MB already has planted more than 5,200 willow cuttings along three larger Vancouver Island rivers in an experimental project.)

● Determine how rapidly after logging any detrimental change is repaired, and the major factors in such recovery.

The scientists feel that several seasons of study will be required to establish accurate "baseline" information on biological, chemical and physical factors before logging begins.

This includes gathering information on fish populations, reproduction rates, growth rates, distribution and feeding habits, studying plant and insect life associated with the stream plus water flow, chemical composition, sediment and spawning gravel.

Under the direction of Al Lill, engineer with the resource development branch of the Fisheries Service, a complex of weather recording and stream flow measuring devices are being installed, including a concrete weir where water volume and temperature are constantly recorded.

Eventually there will be three weirs at the site. A second weir now is under construction and a third will be built in October. Two small buildings have been constructed at the site to house the scientific crew and their laboratory equipment.

"Of major interest," says Dr. Narver, "is the effect of forest removal on stream flow — for two reasons. First, the size of coho salmon and steelhead populations are determined by the amount of water in the stream (living space) during the low flow period of August-September.

"If logging results in increased late summer stream flow, as has been recorded elsewhere in North America, this is beneficial.

"Second, all salmon and trout — but particularly chum salmon — are dependent on clear, stable spawning gravel. If, as a result of logging, major increases occur in sediments and floods, this may be harmful."

★ ★ ★

Fish populations are estimated in several ways, including the use of traps and a "shocker" — a battery-operated, portable unit that temporarily immobilizes the fish with pulses of direct current electricity. These devices permit marking as well as counting in order to check on growth and survival rates and fish migrations.

Floating trays and submerged traps are being used to study the types and quantities of insects resident in the water or entering it from banks and overhanging trees.

"MacMillan Bloedel welcomed the opportunity to participate and assist in the study," said John Hemmingsen, MB's executive vice-president, natural resources. "Being a natural resource based industry, we are as concerned as anyone about environmental and ecological matters.

★ ★ ★

"We earnestly hope the study will provide positive information which we can apply in planning future multiple use programs on forest lands managed by the company," said Hemmingsen.

Six organizations have participated so far in the program. These include the Fisheries Research Board — three scientists, a biologist and a technician; resource development branch, Fisheries Service — two biologists, an engineer and two engineering technicians; MacMillan Bloedel — nine forestry and logging personnel; Canadian Forestry Service — two forest ecologists; B.C. Forest Service — two forest rangers; Water Survey of Canada — one engineer. All but MB and the B.C. Forest Servide come under the federal department of the environment.

YOUNG COHO and steelhead trapped by researchers during their migration to the sea are studied by biologist Charles Scrivener of Fisheries Research Board at Carnation Creek study site.

And you thought economy meant compromise.

It's the things you don't have to give up that make the Mazda 1600 c.c. Sedan. Like driving. You can go all day without aching in your bones. Or in your pocketbook.

The Mazda 1600 is the most comfortable car in the class. It has a longer wheelbase. A wider stance. And the finest suspension system at any price.

For performance, the overhead cam piston engine is tough and efficient. You can climb mountains and cross prairies without strain. And you'll get top mileage on regular gas.

You don't have to give up on the interior. The Mazda 1600 is luxurious and roomy. With body contoured bucket seats. Wall-to-wall carpeting. Padded dash and fine instrumentation. And a back seat with plenty of legroom.

And unlike a lot of imports the Mazda 1600 Sedan doesn't give up on the outside. It's graceful with lines that flow instead of angles that jar. So it doesn't look like you're driving a bargain.

You could buy a lot of little cars for less. If you don't mind a lot of little compromises. Or you could buy a Mazda 1600 Sedan.

DAVIS

He Offers a New Image, New Flair to Lure Vote

TORONTO (CP) — In the seven months since he came from the education ministry, William Grenville Davis, Ontario's 18th premier, has created an image of dervish activity.

But his impact may not have had time to be felt by the public, a major concern for the boyish-faced Brampton lawyer entering his first election Oct. 21 as leader of a party in uninterrupted power for 28 years.

His task has been to convince Ontario's more than four million voters that the Progressive Conservatives have not become stodgy, that "a new wave," represented by his rise to power March 1, has meant change.

The Tories plan to increase their campaign budget this time by 10 per cent over the $2 million bill in 1967.

They will push the theme that Davis is a new man with new policies and new flair to offset a trend in recent Canadian elections against established governments, reflected in upsets in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

See also Page 44

Davis has said the same thing won't happen here because the issues are different.

As to change, there are few traces left of the political machine John Robarts, his predecessor, ran for nine years. Robarts has retired to a business career but he left a legacy of power that's reflected in the 68 seats the Tories hold in the 117-seat legislature. The Liberals have 27, the New Democrats 21 and there is one independent.

When he took over, Davis, 42, began to put his own imprint on the party with a wholesale reshuffling of the cabinet, leaving only three of the ministers in the same post Robarts had assigned them.

He created a 13-man inner cabinet as the real governing body, diminishing the role of the powerful treasury board.

He has established a closer liaison with party headquarters and taken a personal hand in all political decisions, something Robarts delegated to trusted aides.

MAJOR CONFERENCE

Davis staged a major conference on economic nationalism despite the fact that before leaving office, Robarts had described economic nationalism as a "honey issue."

As education minister for eight years — he was appointed by Robarts in 1962 at the age of 33 — Davis' public image was cool, machine like and super-efficient.

But now he has acquired a new rapport which manifests itself in his meet-the-people tours.

Folks jab him on the shoulder to make a point, and call him Bill, a drastic departure from Robarts whose steel-eyed look dissuaded anyone who didn't know him intimately from calling him anything but Mr. Robarts or "Mr. Prime Minister," which he favored.

Davis also has abandoned loose-fitting suits that characterized him while education minister. Now, his clothes are trim, almost modish, and his flopping hair, brushed straight down for years, costs $15 a sitting to groom.

GRASS ROOTS

His major policies seem to bear out the claim of a leader with a grass-roots concern.

His decision to stop Toronto's half-completed Spadina expressway was a concern for "people over cars."

He gave 18-year-olds the right to vote, put new curbs on noise, litter and radiation pollution, introduced a form of no-fault automobile insurance, acted to limit foreign investment in new brokerage houses, paperback and periodical distributing companies, and took the unprecedented step of suing Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. for $25 million for polluting the St. Clair water system.

But his critics say all of these moves don't create jobs in a province that has nearly five-per-cent unemployment.

Davis replies by referring to his throne speech announcement to pump $100 million into the house construction industry, the money coming from the private sector — banks — with provincial government backing.

The government has also embarked on a heavy deficit-spending program to prop up the economy, particularly through tax incentives to industry.

Davis has eased drinking laws, amended the Health Act to eliminate double billing and provide for auditing doctors' records.

In his election announcement Davis said the government has approved or initiated "more than 150 individual items of legislation" since he became premier March 1.

And he preceded the election announcement by tying up the loose ends of his legislative package with announcements earlier in the day on exemptions from medical-care payments for the poor and elderly, financial aid to Ontario book publishers and the release of a report on controversial government land dealings in the Niagara escarpment.

The most agonizing decision he had to make was to turn down extension of provincial grants to Roman Catholic separate schools past Grade 10.

It could be the most emotional issue of the campaign, although David has urged personally that it not become the subject of political partisan interests.

Tory strategists are concerned about a gnawing back ailment which Davis has attempted to brush aside as a minor nuisance. The premier's problem is sciatica, a ruptured disc in the lower back which can be aggravated by exhaustion or mental stress.

He is a political powerhouse. He was only 29 when he won his first Peel North seat for the first time with an impressive majority. He was re-elected in 1963 with a whopping majority of 14,000 votes, and returned in the 1967 election with an 8,236 edge.

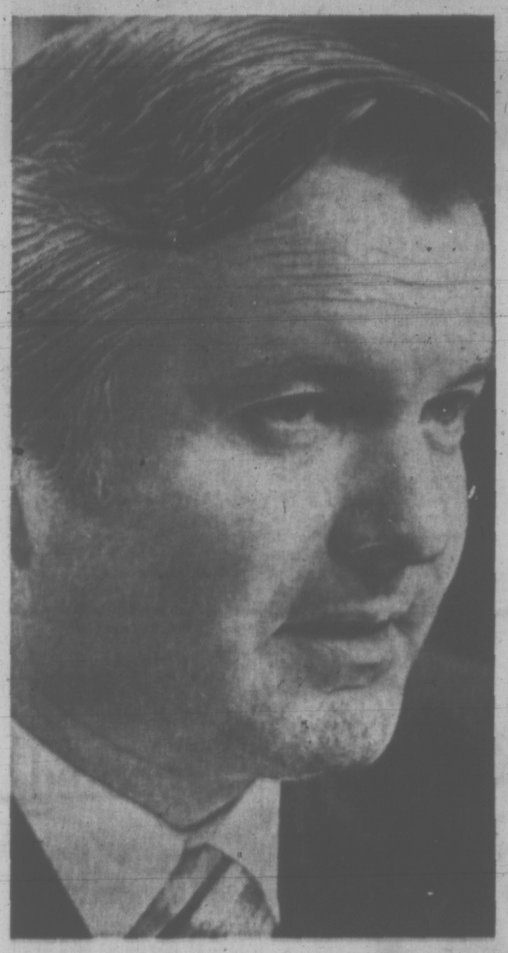
As a high-school student in Brampton, just northwest of Toronto, he won a general proficiency trophy for two successive years. Three years ago, he was named the Ontario Junior Chamber of Commerce's Young Man of the Year.

Called to the bar in 1955 after obtaining his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Toronto, he joined his father's Brampton law firm before entering politics full-time.

An ardent sports fan and athlete — he was a star with Toronto's varsity football team during his college days — Davis also plays a mean hand of bridge and enjoys boating at the family's Georgian Bay cottage.

As education minister, he commanded an annual budget of more than $1 billion. Now, as premier, he oversees a $4 billion government spending program with the largest deficit in the province's history.

"My long years as education minister have certainly served me well in this job," he says. "Being premier doesn't scare me. I wouldn't be here if it did."



DAVIS . . . hopes to offset trend

U.S. Says Phosphates Least of Three Evils

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government said Wednesday that phosphates are "the least of three evils" among laundry detergents and urged reconsideration of state and local laws banning or restricting them.

"My advice to the housewife at this time is to use a phosphate detergent," U.S. Surgeon-General Jesse Steinfeld told a news conference. "The safest thing in terms of human health is to use phosphates."

Phosphates are still considered a leading cause of lake deterioration, Steinfeld said.

A third alternative, nitrilotriacetic acid (NTA) should not be used in detergents at this time because of possible links with cancer and birth defects, Steinfeld said. No NTA detergents are currently marketed.

Phosphate substitutes are chemical formulas that are generally kept secret by the detergent companies that developed them.

Commissioner Charles Edwards of the Food and Drug Administration said the FDA already requires warning labels on many detergents containing caustic substitutes for phosphates. He said the agency may require "children-proof" packaging for them as well.

Asked whether the government considered phosphates "the least of three evils," Edwards replied: "That certainly is our position, yes."

William Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said the government would deal with phosphates by helping finance sewage treatment improvements to remove them from waste water.

U.S., German Doctors Clash With Soviet MDs

OTTAWA (CP) — West German and U.S. doctors disagreed pointedly Wednesday with a Soviet Union colleague over the merits of assistant doctors.

The German challenged the picture given by Professor Fedor Romaschov of the Soviet Union's feldcher, or doctor-assistant, system.

The American called on his countrymen to resist the 'back door' entry into medical care of all kinds of auxiliary health workers.

Romaschov, a 41-year-old heart and abdominal surgeon from Patrice Lumumba University, Moscow, told the World Medical Association meeting here that the Soviet Union will expand the supply of secondary medical workers to give "more complete medical assistance to people."

By 1980, the Soviet Union would have more than 101.6 feldchers and similar medical workers per 10,000 population, compared with 90 now. The per-capita doctor supply in the same period would decline to 34.6 per 10,000 from 36.

More than 300,000 of the present 419,000 feldchers work in cities and towns, performing many public-health and emergency-care services, including some urgent surgery.

URBAN JOBS

Dr. Ernst Fromm of Germany noted that the Soviet Union has a large rural population but twice as many feldchers work in urban settings.

"Is the anatomy and physiology of people in cities so different from those in rural areas?" he asked.

Romaschov said each feldcher on graduating must serve three years in a designated post and then is free to select where to work.

New Device Vaporizes Anything

OTTAWA (CP) — A new Canadian company has entered world markets with equipment that can harness power as great as the sun's from a box little bigger than a filing cabinet.

It is part of a Canadian stake in the application of laser beams to the new science of plasma physics which scientists hope will enable them to produce electricity from nuclear fusion — the kind of atomic reaction that now is limited to hydrogen bombs.

The company is Lumonics Research Ltd. which started production last January of new gas lasers discovered by the Defence Research Board. The production was funded by $70,000 from the National Research Council and $155,000 from the trade department.

The simple, low-cost instruments produce brief pulses of radiation 100 times greater than any existing gas lasers and are capable of instantly vaporizing any known substance.

In so doing, the temperatures created are greater than those on the sun's surface.

Lasers are powerful, concentrated light beams, able to travel such great distances that the United States space program used them to relay information from the Moon directly to earth.

Lumonics Research's laser is based on a type invented by a research team headed by Dr. J. A. Beaulieu, 37, of Quebec City. Patents held for the Defence Research Board were licensed to Lumonics and GenTec 1969 Inc., of Quebec.

COFFIN-SIZE BOX

Lumonics' first product, an instrument 6 feet, 8 inches by 20 inches by 12 inches goes on display today at the Electro-Optics Industry trade show in New York.

The company already has a contract worth more than $35,000 to supply a United States corporation working on a classified U.S. government nuclear project.

A. R. Buchanan, Lumonics president, said in an interview he expects the biggest market at the start will be among the 400 research groups in North America working in the field of plasma physics.

A plasma is an electrically-charged gas. With its ability to disintegrate any known substance, gas lasers such as those of Lumonics's in effect, create an instant plasma when they vaporize a target.

Proposals have been put before the National Research Council for a multi-million dollar program of research into development and use of plasma technology.

This also might be a source of sales for Lumonics and Gen-Tec.

THEFT UNDER INVESTIGATION

Undercover Police Notes Published

VANCOUVER (CP)— Police are investigating the publishing of excerpts from a stolen undercover police officer's notebook in Tuesday's edition of the Georgia Straight.

Deputy Police Chief Tom Stokes said the notebook was taken sometime between Aug. 28 and Sept. 6 in a break-in of Constable F. H. W. Dixon's apartment in Burnaby. Dixon is a member of a squad that has been investigating the sale of soft drugs in Vancouver's Gastown district.

The notes in the stolen book detailed his activities between July 2 and Aug. 19.

The Georgia Straight, a weekly newspaper published in Vancouver from offices in Gastown, carried detailed excerpts from the book and also published a sample of the officer's handwriting.

The headline of the story reads: "Secret papers of a drug cop — revealing summer 'Ti undercover operations of Police Constable F. Dixon in Gastown, All Seasons, Last Chance (saloon)."

The printed excerpts detail drug purchases the officer and his partner made during their plainclothes operation.

Police said Dixon was absent from his apartment between Aug. 28 and Sept. 6 on holidays when thieves broke into the premises and stole the book and a portable television set.

The book was taken from a locked briefcase which had been out open. Other papers in the briefcase were not stolen.

Stokes said detectives are at present investigating the publishing of the note book's contents.

The Straight inked out some names and addresses in publishing what it called "complete excerpts from the notebook" of Dixon.

A July 28 entry details how the undercover policeman, operating with a police-woman, bought a fellow a beer in the hotel near Gastown and got from him directions where to buy a key (2.2 pounds) of marijuana for $240.

The pair went to a house, argued about the price and left to meet other members of the drug squad and borrow $200 from the RCMP.

After buying the key, the two were picked up half a block away by two members of the police drug squad.

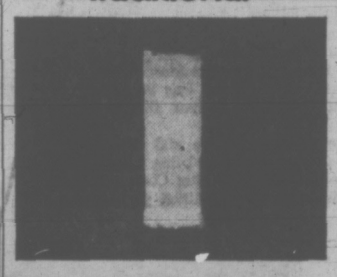
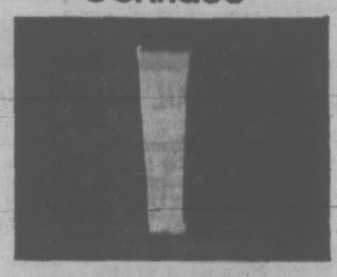
Here are five improvements your sanitary napkin should have had years ago.

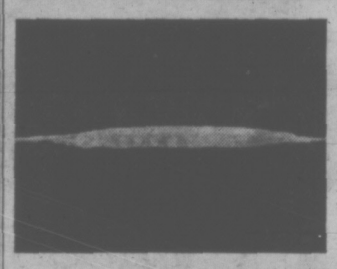
And five reasons why you should switch to Confidets now.

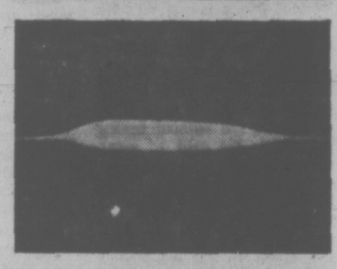
Traditional: Confidets:





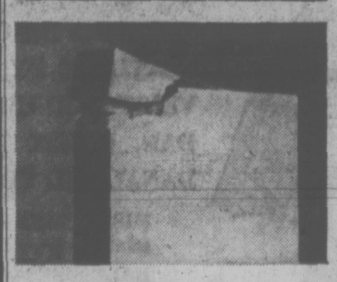
1 The traditional napkin is rectangular shaped, too wide in the middle to fit properly. That means bunching and folding over. The Confidet is a tapered napkin, narrower across the centre. That means a snug, comfortable fit.



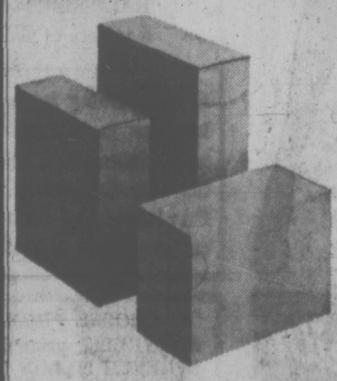


2 Confidets are thicker through the middle. That means extra absorbency. Traditional napkins are flat, the same thickness all over. So how can they be really effective? Yet Confidets aren't bulky, because they get slimmer towards the ends, see? One more thing, Confidets have a special inner layer of plastic that's bonded in place so it positively can't slip. That means extra security.

3 The covering of traditional napkins is soft. But soft and flimsy. That means the material will rip apart when attached to a sanitary belt. Confidets combine a strong underlayer with a soft, finely textured outer layer. You get end tabs that don't shred. They fasten securely and stay fastened.



4 Traditional napkin packages have perforated openings that tear unevenly and break fingernails. Confidets have a convenient tearstrip. Just lift up the tab, and rip! It's that simple. Traditional napkin boxes don't close properly once they've been opened. That means exposing new napkins to dust and dirt. Confidets have a reclosable lid. Take out one napkin, then close up the package tight, till next time.



5 Traditional napkins come in "regular" and "super" absorbencies. If you have a heavier flow at the start of your period, you should really have both on hand. You needn't bother. Confidets are both. You get the absorbency of a super pad and the trimness of a regular, all in one napkin.

Confidets: the napkin that makes others seem old-fashioned.

Tax Bill Seen To Kill Co-ops

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs on both sides of the Commons have criticized sections of the government's tax bill that they say would drive co-operatives out of business.

Andre Fortin (SC—Lotbiniere) and Gordon Blair (L—Grenville-Carleton) attacked the clauses during debate on a Conservative motion that would in effect kill the bill.

Other MPs took broader swipes at the legislation.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said the bill neglected demands from the public—and the stated aim of the government—to encourage manufacturing industries rather than extraction of resources.

William Skoreyko (PC—Edmonton East) said that "nothing in this bill counters any of the problems facing the country today."

The two agreed it would do nothing to help Canadian investors replace U.S. investors in Canadian industry.

Mr. Fortin attacked the bill's clauses that would treat co-ops the same way as corporations for tax purposes.

Mr. Blair agreed the proposal was a "flaw" in the bill.

Especially hard-hit would be small fishing and farming communities, which already were suffering economic hardships.

He said he hoped the government would reconsider the proposals, for the sake of the 1.7-million members of co-operatives in Canada.

But Mr. Blair accused the opposition of trying to take partisan advantage of present economic difficulties by moving the motion to kill the bill.

CRITICIZES MOTION

The motion was "a stall and nothing more than that."

It would create even more uncertainty, already perpetuated by the long tax review.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said the white paper on tax reform had done more damage to the economy than the motion could.

He said the tax review was a grandiose display of reform that had led to "minute housekeeping measures."

It was all an attempt to camouflage a lack of action to solve problems of unemployment and inflation.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said the government made a great show of reforming the tax system, then settled for the least necessary to win the next election.

"Maybe, I'm too much of a socialist, but I believe there should be some principle involved," he added when Liberal MPs cheered at the mention of an election win.

Mr. Peters echoed Mr. Orlikow and Mr. Skoreyko, who called the bill's tax breaks for low-income groups insignificant.

A taxpayer earning $1,002 yearly would save $15 in tax, one with $8,000 would save $3.

Someone earning $15,000 yearly would pay $64 more, but a $75,000-a-year man would pay $377 less.

Tourist Hurt, Released

An American tourist who dislocated his shoulder in a camping accident in Central Saanich early Wednesday was discharged today from Rest Haven Hospital, Sidney.

Sidney RCMP said Hillas Matthews, 66, from Golconda, Ill., tripped and fell while descending from the rear of a camper at KOA Campground near Mt. Newton Cross Road and the Patricia Bay Highway.

Deaths Down In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — The United States command announced today that 14 U.S. servicemen were killed in action on Vietnam last week, the ninth straight week battlefield deaths remained under 20.

The casualty summary listed 49 U.S. troops wounded in action last week, the lowest wounded total in six years.

The command also said 12 Americans died last week from non-hostile causes such as accidents and illness.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 264 South Vietnamese troops were killed in action last week, up 30 from the previous week, and 508 were wounded.

The U.S. summary said combined forces killed 1,070 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops last week, a sharp drop from the 1,743 claimed killed two weeks ago.

ALASKA NATIVES MAY GET LAND

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives interior committee began work today on legislation to give Alaska natives about $1 billion and 40 million acres in settlement of land claims.

Some 55,000 Eskimos, Aleuts and Indians claim ancestral title to most of the land mass of Alaska, which the United States bought from Russia a century ago for $7.2 million.

The Nixon administration has given strong support to the land-claim settlement, which moved closer to realization Wednesday when the Senate interior committee approved a bill similar to the one being studied by the House committee.

The Senate version called for $500 million in payments over 12 years and an additional $500 million in royalties from mineral production on Alaska public lands.

The Senate bill, called the most generous settlement proposal ever reported by a congressional committee, also would give the natives a choice, by referendum, between two land-grant proposals.

The first would give the natives title to 40 million acres of land, mostly in contiguous blocks around villages. This is similar to a land-grant proposal recommended by the administration.

The second alternative would give the natives title to 30 million acres, including mineral rights in 26 million acres and surface ownership of four million acres, plus the right to use an additional 20 million acres.

The House subcommittee bill under consideration calls for nearly $1 billion in cash and royalties, and grants of 20 million acres immediately with an additional 20 million acres after Alaska has completed land selections under its statehood act.

Hospital Strike Set

EDMONTON (CP) — About 300 service employees at the Misericordia Hospital will go on strike at 8 a.m. Saturday to back contract demands, it was announced Wednesday.

"We'll be out until we reach a settlement," said Don David, business representative of Local 323A of the Service Employees International Union.

The workers voted to go on strike last week after the hospital board rejected a conciliation board report recommending a 20-per-cent wage increase over 27 months. The union had accepted the report.

$5M Claimed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five companies claiming a total of more than $5 million moved in court Tuesday to have Churchill Forest Industries and M.P. Industrial Mills declared bankrupt.

Authority to file bankruptcy applications against the two firms was obtained from Chief Justice G. E. Tritschler in Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench. The bankruptcy petitions are to be heard Sept. 30.

M. P. Industrial Mills is the subject of the largest single application, for $4,911,237, from Commonwealth Construction Co. Another petition, from Bingham Pump, seeks $4,941.

Paper Carries On

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP) — The Manitoba French weekly newspaper, La Liberte te le Patriote, will continue to publish in spite of financial difficulties and dwindling circulation, Publisher Gerald Dorge said Wednesday.

A St. Boniface businessman, Clement Benjamin, has been appointed financial adviser to the 58-year-old weekly and will be devising programs of expansion and redistribution, Dorge said in an interview. The publication is the only French newspaper published in Manitoba or Saskatchewan.

Blast Protested

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's new environment minister has appealed to President Nixon to cancel the proposed nuclear explosion on Amchitka Island near Alaska.

"As this nuclear blast will have global reverberations and ultimately affect the evolution of civilization itself, we ask that you reflect deeply and sincerely upon the need for such experimentation," said Bill Yurko in a telegram sent Tuesday.

Teacher Quotas?

EDMONTON (CP) — Soaring unemployment among teachers may force Alberta universities to impose quotas on enrolments in their education faculties, Dr. John MacDonald, dean of the faculty of education at the University of Calgary, said Tuesday.

Commenting on a prediction that as many as 1,000 teachers — 800 more than in 1970-71 — may be out of work this year, Dr. MacDonald said, "it might very well be a good idea to establish quotas in some faculties."

He said in an interview he does not favor a blanket quota but a limitation on particular types of teacher-trainees.

Prospective teachers would be directed toward faculties which provide the best chance of employment.

Go After Share of Japanese Market—Sharp

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian businessmen are being encouraged to go after a share of the Japanese market, External Affairs Minister Sharp told the Commons Wednesday.

He was replying to Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, who asked what specific programs the Canadian government has for manufacturers here now that Japan has eased import restrictions.

This was one of the most important aspects of the meeting of the Canada-Japan Trade Council just concluded in Toronto, Sharp said.

Stanfield asked whether Canada had pressed for greater exports to Japan of Canadian manufactured goods, which now would not face Japanese tariffs.

The minister replied that if Stanfield was suggesting some sort of Canadian export subsidy, the answer was no.

Stanfield continued to ask about specific Canadian government proposals and Sharp said the Conservative leader apparently lacked "confidence in the ability of Canadian businessmen" to seize opportunities in Japan.

"I certainly lack confidence in the government," Stanfield replied.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis asked whether there was any agreement at the Toronto meeting for Canada, Japan and other countries to take steps to counter the recent "protectionist measures" in trade by the U.S.

Sharp said all other trading countries favor freer, not more restricted, trade.

Lewis also asked why the communique issued after the trade council meeting said U.S. economic growth is vital to world trade.

Sharp said an important country such as the U.S. must be "stable and prosperous" if world trade is to grow.

The NDP leader also asked Prime Minister Trudeau when the government's study on foreign ownership in Canada will be released.

Trudeau said it is in an "advanced state" and he hoped it would come out soon.

SKIPPER PAYS $250 FINE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The skipper of the luxury liner Mariposa was fined $250 Wednesday after he pleaded guilty through a lawyer to discharging oil in Vancouver harbor.

Court was told that several gallons of oil were accidentally discharged as the Mariposa entered the harbor Aug. 23. Owners of the liner — a San Francisco company — paid the $250 cleanup costs.

WHEN IS THE MAYOR NOT THE MAYOR?

GALGARY (CP) — When is the mayor not the mayor?

City solicitor J. D. Salmon says it's when the man is filing nomination papers for re-election.

Incumbent Rod Sykes listed his occupation as "mayor" when he filed Wednesday for the Oct. 13 civic election. He was challenged by the solicitor.

"When I asked the city solicitor to suggest an alternative occupation, he was unable to," said Mr. Sykes.

"The mayor's job is the only occupation I have."

They decided to let Attorney-General Mervin Leitch rule on the matter.

Port Glut Holding Up Vital Hawaii Food

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government can do nothing to hasten the unloading of a United States ship in Vancouver so it can be loaded with food urgently needed in Hawaii, a transport department spokesman says.

The vessel, the Matson line's Californian, was chartered by the State of Hawaii. U.S. ports are tied up by a strike.

Because of the strike, the Vancouver port is crowded with many ships, including the Californian, waiting to be unloaded and re-loaded.

In a telegram to the transport department, the Hawaiian government asked Canada to raise the priority of the ship so it can leave for the Islands quickly.

The transport department spokesman said his department had replied to the telegram, saying it would do whatever it could to co-operate.

"But basically, we can't move an American ship ahead of Canadian ships," the spokesman said in an interview.

Every effort would be made to move ships smoothly through Vancouver, he said, but beyond that nothing could be done.

The Canadian ships also had urgently needed cargoes.

"BE PREPARED" has always been a good motto! That's why I make sure I have DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY on my shelf. Then if one of my family suddenly develops the nausea, cramps and weakness of diarrhea, Dr. Fowler's is on hand to bring gentle, soothing relief. Formulated from roots and herbs, it quickly relieves embarrassing symptoms and restores intestinal balance. No one is immune... we all tend to over-indulge at times... even a change of climate or water can be the culprit. Whatever, Dr. Fowler's has helped over 6 generations of Canadian adults and children... the best recommendation I can think of!

TIME AFTER TIME... readers have thanked me for suggesting DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS... when they have had a nagging back-ache and tired feeling. You see, Dodd's contain ingredients that bring effective relief by gently stimulating the kidneys to help relieve back-ache and that worn-out feeling. It was interesting to learn from a friend that Dodd's Kidney Pills are also very helpful during menstrual periods. "Dodd's Kidney Pills help relieve excess retention of body fluids resulting in bloating, swelling caused by urinary irritation during the menstrual period", she said. Another reason, I'm sure, why millions of people use Dodd's!

African Violet Growers Gather

By HILDA BEASTALL

Not every year do we attract national flower shows to Victoria, possibly because gardeners as a whole are not inclined to fly off to the opposite side of the continent for the event. They stay closer to their gardens. This year however, the Victoria African Violet Club is host to the national show of the African Violet Society of Canada Friday and Saturday.

The event will be staged at the Wilson Motor Inn, at the corner of Courtney and Blanshard Street, across from the Law Courts.

Hilda

The same two days have been chosen by the Victoria Horticultural Society for their fall show this year at the St. Andrew's Hall, 1012 Pandora Avenue.

Try to take in both these shows, so different in content and presentation. The two halls are within a few blocks of each other in almost the central part of town.

All fall flowers and vegetables will be shown at the horticultural show, including large sections of classes for chrysanthemums and dahlias. If you have missed seeing these at other recent shows, here is another fine chance.

The fruit and vegetable section at this show covers just about every kind of garden produce we can raise here, though I find my favorite garlic is missing. It could appear in "any other" category.

Roses, tuberous begonias, Michaelmas-daisies (the fall asters), other perennials and the anuals of fall have their alotted classes. One of the loveliest to look at will be the large baskets of fall flowers, foliage and berries. This for me is a highlight of fall gardening if the exhibits are well arranged.

The hours for the fall show at St. Andrew's hall are Friday from 2 to 10 p.m.; Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. with presentation of trophies and awards at 8, followed by an auction of donated exhibits.

At the African violet show you will see not only every kind of "violet" that has been bred, but other members of the Gesneraid family to which the African Violet belongs.

This national show opens at 3 p.m. Friday, with the official opening by Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett at 3:30. It remains open until 9.

Saturday you can see this show between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

If tired of city life and its crowds, you can take a refreshing trip on Saturday to the quiet and peace of Salt Spring Island.

The Garden Club there is holding its Centennial fall show in Fulford Community Hall Saturday, with doors open from 2 until 4:30 p.m.

Apart from seeing another fine show, you will enjoy a different environment for a few hours, with afternoon tea available in the show hall before taking the ferry back to Swartz Bay.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

Usually, in a team-of-four match, the making of an overtrick or two is of little importance, since the scoring is by total points, as in rubber bridge. But, on occasion, an overtrick made by one team, and the failure of the other team to make the overtrick on the replay, can spell the difference between winning and losing.

Back in 1946, the team of Margaret Wagar, Sol Mogal, Maj. Williams Christian and Capt. Mark Hodges captured the Masters Team-of-Four Championship. Their margin of victory was 30 points, the equivalent of a major suit or no-trump overtrick. Today's deal was the final one in the 64-deal match. The opening lead determined the outcome of the match. Christain was the South declarer.

Opening lead: Ace of ♡.

After ruffing the ace of hearts with his king of trumps, Christian cashed the queen of trumps. He next led the trump jack to the board's ace, picking up West's remaining trump en route.

He then played the high king of hearts, upon which he discarded his deuce of clubs. Next came a club to his ace, and this was followed by a club to dummy's king. A third club lead was now ruffed by South. Both of dummy's remaining clubs had just become winners.

Dummy was then re-entered by leading the six of trumps to the board's seven-spot. On the two established clubs South discarded two of his diamonds. He now conceded a diamond to the opposition, for the defenders' only trick. Thus he made two overtricks.

When the deal was replayed with Major Christian's teammates holding the East-West cards, South also arrived at a four-spade contract (by opening the bidding with four spades). But Mrs. Wagar, West, elected to open the diamond queen, and the defenders quickly cashed two diamond tricks. Eventually they also made a club trick, since South had no place to park his losing club.

By scoring two overtricks, worth 30 points apiece, Christiah's team won the match by just 30 points. Had he not scored any overtricks (if the West defender had guessed to lead a diamond originally), his team would have lost the match — and the championship — by 30 points!

More Union Participation Seen in Ontario NDP Campaign

PEARSON

By IAN PORTER
Canadian Press Labor Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Union officials in Ontario eye the latest political readings almost as religiously as stockholders watch the daily market quotations.

Their mood varies with day-to-day fluctuations but with the Oct. 21 provincial election campaign under way, it seems bullish indeed.

More than at any time since organized labor helped form the New Democratic Party in 1961, they are confident the stock is about to soar, especially among their own people.

"There'll be more union participation in the NDP campaign this year than ever before," predicts one official of the Ontario Federation of Labor.

"The feeling is around that the party just might come away with the marbles this time. At least, that it could be the largest group in the legislature after the election."

But union officials are careful to hedge when they discuss the extent of labor's backing for the NDP. While they make no secret of their support, they don't want to give the impression that the party is the creature of the unions.

HAVE NO GUARANTEE

They know there is no guarantee that even a majority of the 900,000 union members in Ontario will back the party on eleetion day.

At dissolution, the NDP held 21 seats, the Progressive Conservatives 68, Liberals 27 and Independent one.

In British Columbia, where the old CCF and the NDP have long been political bridesmaids on the verge of victory, NDP Leader David Barrett has been working to convince voters that labor's support isn't that important.

Ontario unionists grant the findings of a recent study indicating that close to 75 per cent of Canada's organized workers have never voted either for the NDP or the predecessor CCF.

And Ontario Leader Stephen Lewis has said that the workers "have not only declined to follow the exhortations of their leaders; they have also rejected a party whose policies, those of us in it are persuaded, are in their own best interests."

In Oshawa, the United Auto Workers has successfully mobilized its members to support the NDP and the party now represents the riding both federally and provincially; yet while 70 to 80 per cent of the workers' votes go to the NDP, only some 60 per cent of its members bother to go to the polls.

"We think our fellows substantially support the NDP," says one UAW officer. "Our problem is to get them to vote."

SAY SUPPORT GROWING

Unionists, however, claim that labor support for the NDP is growing.

One indication is that more union members are joining the party and playing an active role in its affairs.

Another is simply the rise in the party's standing in the legislature to 21 seats. The trend has reversed the decline of the parent CCF which had dropped to five seats by 1961 from 34 in 1945.

Perhaps the biggest encouragement, however, has been the party's successes in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Labor contributed heavily to those campaigns in both men and money.

Relatively little of the NDP campaign backing, however, will come from the dues checkoff that affiliated union locals contribute at the rate of five cents a month a member.

The checkoff yields the provincial wing of the party close to $45,000 a year but almost all of it goes to pay administrative expenses.

More important are the election funds raised by district labor councils and the political action committees of a number of union locals.

The Metro Toronto Labor Council is seeking at least $35,000 from the 160,000 members of its affiliated unions. Comparable efforts are under way in such cities as Kitchener, London, Windsor, and in Hamilton. A contribution of $15,000 once again has come from the 12,000-member Local 1005, United Steelworkers of America.

The party is pledged to add up its union contributions in public after the election. But the money is only part of the story.

In most ridings, the NDP campaign will be heavily dependent on volunteers going door to door seeking support.

Thirty per cent or more of the volunteers are likely to be union members, many taking part as a result of continuing political education programs within their unions.

The UAW alone has planned to support as many as 24 full-time campaign workers. Half will be direct employees of the union on leave from their lar duties. The others will be union members pulled from their jobs for the duration with their salaries to be paid by the union.

Dief 'Fit' And Ready To Travel

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — "Happy days are here again," John Diefenbaker said Wednesday as he told of his doctors' latest reports on a spell in a Wales hospital after being hit with stomach trouble on a holiday.

"The doctors are delighted with my progress," the former Canadian prime minister said in a telephone interview from the Maelor Hospital at Wrexham in Wales.

The 75-year-old politician, up and around for the second time since going into the hospital eight days ago, said he expects to fly back to Canada Friday and rest up in Ottawa before returning to the Commons in about three weeks.

His wife Olive, who has been with him at Wrexham, will be on the Canadian air force plane.

The Diefenbakers were on a holiday in North Wales with old friend Brig. Michael Wardell, former publisher of the Federicton Gleaner, when the former prime minister came down with stomach trouble Sept. 4.

All the Wrexham hospital has said so far is that he is being tested for abdominal complaints and is resting comfortably.

But he said Wednesday he now is fit and ready to travel.

VC PEACE PLAN NOT GONE SOFT

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam and the Viet Cong restated today their seven-point peace plan in the hardest possible terms, indirectly repudiating a report from Senator George S. McGovern that the Communist peace terms have softened.

The South Dakota Democrat spent six hours last week with Hanoi's chief negotiator, Xuan Thuy, and acting Viet Cong delegate Dinh Ba Thi. Prior to his departure for Saigon Sunday, McGovern told a news conference the Communist delegates indicated to him they were prepared to abandon several of the key conditions in the peace plan.

At today's 129th weekly session of the Paris peace talks, Thuy reiterated that a total U.S. withdrawal and the establishment of a government of "national concord" excluding President Nguyen Van Thieu remained the basic demands in the seven points.

"Settlement of these two basic points will facilitate the settlement of the others," Thuy said.

McGovern, a candidate for his party's presidential nomination, said Thuy repeatedly assured him Hanoi would accept a total U.S. withdrawal without insisting on the overthrow of Thieu as a prior condition for any settlement.

Senate Hires Tax Experts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate banking committee is hiring tax experts to tutor it in the finer points of the government's bill to revise the Income Tax Act.

Committee chairman Salter Hayden (L — Ontario) said in an interview today that former Quebec senator Lazarus Phillips, a former president of the Canadian Tax foundation, and Albert Poissant, a Montreal chartered accountant, have been retained by the committee.

The committee's study of the bill, introduced in the Commons June 19, will start Sept. 29. Senator Hayden said the commiittee would complete its study by the last week in November.

The Commons began debate onthe bill Monday.

Town of 10,000 Wiped Out by Napalm

KOMPONG THMAR, Cambodia (WP) — American bombers levelled most of this town with napalm just two weeks ago, and the air is still rancid with the smell of ashes dampened by the monsoon rains.

Nearby villagers described Wednesday how the planes, too fast to be the propelliered T-28S of the tiny Cambodian air force, streaked by and dumped their stocks on the Communist troops who were fiercely resisting government pressure on the ground.

Before the war, there were some 10,000 people living here, although with almost every building now destroyed, its hard to imagine where. The people have scattered. Many fled closer to Phnom Penh, some went with the enemy, a few remain in the debris.

STRATEGIC CROSSING

Kampong Thmar is at a strategic crossing point on Highway 6 about 75 miles from the capital. Not long after the Vietnam war spread to Cambodia in March, 1970, the town and the villages all around it fell to the Viet Cong and their Cambodian allies, the Khmer Rouge.

There was heavy fighting and destruction in the towns of Skoun and Tangkouk some 20 miles away, but Kampong Thmar was spared and local officials say that life under the Viet Cong went on more or less as before.

Then, almost a month ago, a 15,000-man Cambodian task force, supported almost daily by American air strikes, began moving along Highway 6 in a determined effort to retake the road and sweep the Communists from the rice paddies and rubber plantations around it.

The eventual objective is to link up with troops operating from the provincial town of Kampong Thom, long surrounded by the enemy.

It is one of the biggest offensives mounted by the Cambodians in a war that from Saigon or Washington seems perhaps more static than it actually is.

From the standpoint of the government, the current operation, known as Tchenla Two, has been an enormous success so far, bringing back under Cambodian control an important part of a vital population and transportation corridor. Even with the razing of Kampong Thmar, the cost has been relatively low, Ca- their occupation. Much has

Pilots Told 'Ignore' DoT Order

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Air Line Pilots Association has told its members to ignore a department of transport order on noise abatement because pilots should be more interested in safety than the noise created by jets.

Capt. C. H. Simpson, association president, said Wednesday the transport department had asked that a 20-degree turn be made when taking off from Runway 32 at Toronto International Airport.

"It's time the politicians paid some attention to the safety of the travelling public," he said.

He said, for instance, that if a heavily-loaded jet trying to make the turn were to suffer a severe power failure there would be danger of a crash.

Simpson blamed politicians for the turn order because the city had been allowed to expand right into the flight path."

The association was also critical of the number of hours some pilots have to fly without proper sleep.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

Winnipeg (CP) — Rapeseed futures closed lower on continued pressure from commission house and hedge selling on the grain exchange today.

Barley futures were also down slightly on maltster buying and commission house selling.

Other commodities had moderate trade.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 2,532,000 bushels of rapeseed, 253,000 of rye and 240,000 of flax.

BENSON FEARS TRADE 'WAR'

LONDON (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada today urged a fundamental reform of the world monetary system to prevent any outbreak of a devastating international trade war.

Benson told an emergency meeting of the 10 richest non-Communist nations—the Group of 10—that recent United States measures to protect the American economy pose a serious threat to the freedom of world trade.

Benson, this year's chairman of the group, said a full examination of the current monetary system should be made by the International Monetary Fund.

"We must proceed at once with the process of currency realignment and proceed as quickly as possible with the reduction of trade restrictions throughout the world," the Canadian minister said.

"It would facilitate the immediate adjustments required if our American colleagues could tell us more precisely what conditions . . . have to be met before they will remove the (10-per-cent import) surcharge."

Benson was referring to a U.S. decision announced Aug. 15 to impose the new import duty and to suspend the gold convertibility of the dollar.

Benson said the present instability in international monetary markets has forced a number of countries to restrict capital flows in an effort to ease pressure on their currencies.

"The real danger is that this pattern of restriction will be extended to the trade field.

"This points to the urgent necessity of dealing with the present situation before it degenerates into a process that will be extermely difficult reverse."

The minister said it is unlikely any satisfactory set of exchange rates can be negotiated while the import duty remains in effect.

He said extensive action is needed to "dissipate the serious clouds that now hang over the future of international trade."

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer managing director of the IMF, urged the Group of 10 today to adopt a four-point compromise plan for overcoming the monetary crisis.

Schweitzer unveiled a plan that conference sources said included these points:

1. A general realignment in the exchange rates of the world's leading currencies, including an upward revaluation of the major European currencies and the Japanese yen and a downward devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

2. A new reserve system in which special drawing rights in the IMF would assume some of the reserve role backing currencies now held by gold.

3. An effort to swing the U.S. balance of payments from its current deficit to a surplus, in which the U.S. allies would assume a share of the burden.

4. After the achievement of these steps the time would be ripe to remove the 10-per-cent duty on imports.

No clear-cut solutions are expected at the end of the two-day emergency conference of the group, which began Wednesday.

No More Trade Curbs, Canada Pleads

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has appealed to the United States to refrain from imposing additional trade restrictions in response to a proposed program to provide federal subsidies to Canadian exporters.

A letter to U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally from Finance Minister E. J. Benson asks him to regard the subsidy program as a measure to maintain employment, not as a form of retaliation against U.S. import surcharges imposed last month.

At the same time, Canadian authorities are asking Japan and European trading partners to guard against permitting a heavy increase of exports to Canada.

Officials are particularly worried that shipments of steel, automobiles and textile products originally intended for the U.S. market may be diverted into Canada, disrupting markets here.

The government's actions were disclosed today by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin at a session of the Commons finance committee.

The appeals to Canada's trading partners constitute efforts to minimize disruption of Canadian trade, production and employment resulting from the U.S. trade restrictions invoked Aug. 15.

Canada has appealed unsuccessfully for exemption from the U.S. surcharges. At the same time, it is attempting to persuade Japan and Western Europe to co-operate in developing a new system of currency exchange that would benefit U.S. trade.

In the meantime, there are official fears in Ottawa that the program to help Canadian exporters—carrying grants that would cover up to two-thirds of the U.S. surcharges—will trigger U.S. countervailing duties against the entry of Canadian goods.

It depends on whether the U.S. treasury secretary regards the Canadian legislation as an export-subsidy program — thereby triggering countervailing duties or, the Canadian authorities would prefer, as an innocent measure designed strictly to stave off further unemployment.

ON SECURITY COUNCIL—U.S.

Put China in Seat!

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States proposed today the permahent seat on the UN Security Council be given to Communist China.

The proposal was put forward by U.S. Ambassador George Bush at a meeting attended by more than 30 delegations friendly to Nationalist China.

Bush presented an amended draft resolution on the China issue which would give UN membership to both the Chinese Communists and the Nationalist Chinese with the security council seat now held by the Nationalists going to the Communists instead.

The U.S. revised the draft of the resolution after a number of Taiwan's staunchest supporters requested the change. The resolution goes to the assembly early next week.

After the meeting Bush expressed confidence that the U.S. policy for a dual Chinese representation in the UN is on the way to success.

"I have a distinct feeling that there is a forward motion," he said.

Diplomatic sources said the U.S. action was taken to get the support of Japan which has great prestige in Asia.

NEWS BRIEFS

Debate Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — Approval was given in the Commons today for a special debate on the government's refusal to make payments to the Canadian wheat board under legislation still in force. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said the special debate could be held this evening. Formal impeachment notice was filed today against three cabinet ministers.

49 Killed

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — A Soviet-made TU134 passenger plane of the Hungarian Airline crashed today near Kiev, in the Soviet Union, killing all 49 persons aboard, the Hungarian news agency MTI said. MTI said it had no further details.

Policeman Injured

BELFAST (AP) — British troops clashed early today with rioters protesting Northern Ireland's clampdown on the Irish Republican Army. Bombs exploded in scattered sectors of Belfast, an electricity pylon was blown up near Omagh and another blast of gelignite shattered the front of a police station at Lisburn.

Deadly Attack

SAIGON (Reuter) — Fifteen persons were killed and 57 injured by a bomb blast Wednesday night at a fashionable nightclub in what appeared to be the most deadly terrorist attack in Saigon for more than six years.

New Pill Found

ROME (Reuter) — A team of Italian scientists said today it has reached an advanced stage of research with a new contraceptive pill. The pill would prevent fertilization without preventing ovulation as pills now in use do.

NO WELFARE FOR UNDER-19s

VANCOUVER (CP) — City welfare director Walter Boyd has cut off social assistance payments to most persons under the age of 19, charging that many young applicants simply want to "shack up, blow grass and generally dig the scene at taxpayer expense."

Boyd took the action through a directive to the city welfare staff to remove all 18- and 17-year-olds and most 18-year-olds from the assistance rolls. He said about 250 persons are affected.

Bogey Man Land Developer 'Is a Mythical Creature'

The bogey man land developer who inflates land prices through monoplistic deals in B.C. suburbs is a mythical creature only, according to a study released in Victoria today.

Despite land prices that have risen faster than other housing indexes; developers are only taking out of land what people are willing to pay in a healthy land market.

In an interview before presenting his report to the convention, Prof. Stan Hamilton of the University of British Columbia said he found "no artificial price inflation" in land trading in the province's suburban areas, where housing subdividing normally occurs.

"People say they can't afford a house — I say they can't afford a house where they want it," Hamilton said.

The study was sponsored by the UBCM and aided by a grant from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Hamilton co-authored the report with Prof. R. U. Ratckiff. Both men are in NBC's urban land economics division of the faculty of Commerce and Business Administration.

There are close to twice as many acres of suburban land sold as there are acres subdivided, indicating land is not dribbled out for use at ransom prices by companies with huge holdings, Hamilton said.

"There is almost a total absence of land-banking by developers," he said, but added that people other than developers are holding land. These and the "little old lady" who have been there for 40 years" include the "farmers who refuses to move out and let new development in.

Ratcliff and Hamilton took samples of land trading in Saanich, Kamloops, Richmond, Surrey and Coquitlam between 1954 and 1970.

There is no doubt, Hamilton said, that land prices have risen faster than the consumer price index, than the cost of construction, the cost of servicing and other indicators. The only aspect of development with faster rising costs is financing of money.

'LAST CENT'

Developers are "extracting the last cent from the public," he said, "but they are doing it in a competative situation."

A formula worked out for the study which traced the long-term trend of land price increases between 1954 and 1970 shows land was inflated at about 7.25 per cent per annum, compounded.

Ratcliff and Hamilton's land cost price index shows land that cost $100 in 1954 cost $306 in 1970.

Hamilton said some people may have expected the study to recommend that municipalities get into the land bank business in order to improve subdividing performance.

Secret Tip: Early Blast

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The protest vessel Greenpeace sailed out of Vancouver harbor Wernesday night, planning to get to Amchitka Island "as soon as possible" because of a telephone tip that the United States Atomic Energy Commission has advanced the date of a nuclear test on the island.

Jim Bohlen, one of 12 persons aboard the 80-foot Canadian halibut boat, would say only that the Washington, D.C., source of the tip was a reliable and sympathetic one.

The Greenpeace, originally scheduled to sail for the Aleutians at noon, moved out just before 11 p.m. because of delays in fuelling and cleanup details.

Crew members plan to protest the five-megaton underground blast by cruising off the island's three-mile territorial limit on the day of the test, some time in October.

BYPASS STOPS

They expect now to bypass planned stops at the British Columbia ports of Comox, Campbell River and Prince Rupert and go directly to the Aleutians.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Wednesday that Washington knows just how "unanimously and strongly" Canada is opposed to the proposed Amchitka nuclear test.

And in Washington, a spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission said today the commission is awaiting a final decison from the White House before a date can be set for a proposed five-megaton nuclear warhead underground test in Alaska.

GOV'T 'VALET SERVICE'?

If anyone wants to hire a personal valet, the B.C. government will pay half the man's salary.

This is the way Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell described the government's intentions to get people off welfare rolls when he spoke Wednesday to the annual convention of the Union of B.C. municipalities in Victoria.

The program announced earlier this month by Premier Bennett and administered by Campbell, is an attempt to avoid the "mountains of red tape" common to other forms of welfare, Campbell said.

He said he wanted the program to become something "peculiarly made in British Columbia."

A requirement of the plan is that the hired person be on the welfare rolls and Campbell said the government is issuing "certificates of opportunity" to people "if they are eligible for the program."

Campbell said there is no need for confusion about how the plan works. It would be perfectly correct for someone to hire a personal valet and charge the government half the salary.

"The answer is yes if you have an idea for employing people," Campbell stated. "The answer is no if you are expecting a grandiose scheme."

Foods Lead Index Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — The largest mid-summer increase in food prices in more than a decade occurred last month, putting food prices three per cent higher than they were before last fall's supermarket price war, Statistics Canada reported today.

This was by far the largest factor in sending the consumer price index up to a record 135 from 134.1 in July and 130.5 in August last year, based on 1961 prices equalling 100.

In dollar terms, it meant that last year's food bill of $13.19 cost $13.59 in August this year, 26 cents more than in July. After the supermarkets slashed their prices last fall, the price for a comparable basket of goods dropped to $12.56 in December.

The over-all index last month stood 3.4 per cent higher than a year earlier. This showed an acceleration of the rate of price increases, after it had slowed earlier this year to about two per cent.

It meant, said the statistics bureau, that the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer spending dollar was cut to 74 cents last month. It had been 75 cents in July, and 77 cents in August last year.

CLOTHES CHEAPER

While food prices lead the parade of higher prices last month, they were spread over nearly all segments of the overall index which is generally regarded as a measure of the cost of living. Only clothing prices showed any downward movement, and it was small—two-tenths of one per cent.

But some consumer durables items that a family buys infrequently, expecting them to last a long time—also showed some price moderation. Included were prices for new cars, furniture and carpets.

In percentage terms, the index was up seven-tenths of one per cent in the past month, and 3.4 per cent in the past year. Economists believe a consumer price increase of more than two per cent a year is inflationary.

FOOD PRICES UP

Food price increases between July and August in the last five years have averaged 1.2 per cent, but this year they jumped by almost twice that. The statistics bureau said almost all foods had higher prices except vegetables.

Last month's food prices were 8.2 per cent higher than

Edith Lashing Lafayette

CAMERON, La. (AP) — Hurricane Edith lashed into the heavily-populated Lafayette and Baton Rouge areas today with 90-mile-an-hour winds, tornadoes and heavy rains.

At least one death was reported.

The storm had struck the shore at virtually deserted Cameron and the winds then were hitting 100 miles an hour as it headed northeastward into Louisiana and toward central Mississippi.

The fatality was reported at Lake Charles where a man was apparently washed overboard.

Tornadoes struck two schools and several residential areas in Baton Rouge.

One teacher suffered a broken rib and seven pupils were cut by glass.

Nearby, the Sherwood Plaza Shopping Centre, in the eastern part of town, was reported destroyed.

Other tornadoes were reported in St. Martin's Parish and Iberia Parish.

The hurricane came ashore 30 miles east of Cameron, near the Rockefeller Wildlife Refuge in swampy rice-growing country. That is about 50 miles from the Texas border.

Nearly all the residents of the Cameron area had fled.

But a small crew of civil defence workers stayed on to ride out the storm in the boarded-up Cameron City Hall.

Computer Predicts Health for 10 Years

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — When Dr. Lewis C. Robbins of Indianapolis gets out his tip sheets and begins figuring the odds of your living another 10 years, you can bet your life he is right.

Dr. Robbins, his colleagues and their computers are working out a new medical science, called "prospective medicine," which allows them to predict the health of any person for the next 10 years.

The insurance companies have been doing it for years about the death of any person, he told about 500 doctors at a meeting of the College of Family Physicians Wednesday. They can accurately predict the odds on most people living to collect that life insurance.

But Dr. Robbins, head of a health hazard appraisal unit, wants to do it about life and health.

Using statistics carefully collected for about 20 years, he can take a history, supplied by a family doctor, and work out a graphic chart showing what the odds are on your living healthfully for the next 10 years.

He uses a chart, which shows the average life expectancy, and a set of bar graphs showing what might happen to you.

For example, if you are a white male between 40 and 44, and you smoke and drink and don't do any more exercise than an average downtown businessman, your chances of a heart attack in the next 10 years are about double the average.

In fact, you're a longshot in the health race.

However, if you were willing to cut out the smoking, cut down on the drinking and take on an exercise program of, say, walking two miles a day, then your chances of reaching age 54 improve about 10 times. They're even better than half the national average.

Similar to Dr. Robbins' research is another investigation being demonstrated at the college meeting.

Dr. John Merriman of Saskatoon is making physical tests on apparently healthy persons, then drawing up a profile sheet showing how they compare with their ideal selves.

He has even been testing doctors at the college's meeting.

"During the first day of testing," he said in an interview, "we did about 60 doctors and we found two who were showing the first changes for a heart attack in their electrocardiograph."

In Dr. Merriman's tests, the patient has his height, weight and blood pressure recorded and a few questions, including some about smoking, are asked for a history. Then a blood sample is taken and an electrocardiograph done.

The patient then is asked to get on an exercise bicycle and do certain amount of "work." The electrocardiograph tracing is taken while he is pedalling the bicycle and his blood pressure and pulse rates are recorded.

Dr. Merriman, who is doing his research for the University of Saskatchewan, hasn't compiled the statistics on "his doctors" yet, but it appears that they are no more and no less healthy than the average man, he said.

The four-day meeting, designed to provide a continuing education program for family doctors, ends today.

SENATE ASKS FOR EXAM ANALYSIS

Philosophy Success Rate Amazes Uvic Professor

Members of the University of Victoria Senate Wednesday night questioned why no students of Philosophy 100 were failed last year.

As a result, the senate voted to ask for a report on undergraduate marks and an analysis of examination procedures.

The question was raised by chemistry professor Dr. A. D. Kirk, who quoted figures for last year's classes of Philosophy 100, the introductory course in philosophy.

Kirk said that of 349 students last year, 18 per cent received first class honors, 41.5 per cent second class honors, 36.9 per cent pass, and no students were failed.

The fact no students failed was a "positive amazement" to him, Kirk said, adding that "extreme concern has been expressed to me by colleagues not only in chemistry but also in physics.

"What I'm trying to do is stir the pot a little and get everyone concerned about this," Kirk said. "It's a very serious question."

Philosophy department head Dr. Kenneth Rankin said evaluation of students in the philosophy department is based on marks throughout the year, so that when the end of the year approaches the student has a good idea of his chances of passing. Many drop out if they realize they are failing, he said.

"Dr. Kirk's concern is a reasonable one," Rankin said. "I wonder if he would be willing to support an investigation into examinations."

Rankin said examination procedures vary so much in different departments the rate of students who pass or fail doesn't matter.

Arts and science dean John Climenhaga said it is not so much the pass-fail rate that mattered as it is the proportion of students who receive first and second class honors.

Kirk had earlier expressed concern that students were being treated unfairly in competitions for scholarships if some were given higher marks.

Fine arts dean Peter Garvie agreed and said: "I suspect the root of the problem is the regulations senate has set for grades. It's hard for a department chairman to question the mark an instructor gives."

Uvic administration officials came under attack at the meeting for not allowing a sufficient flow of information on university affairs to get to senate members.

When the time came for the chairman of senate, Uvic president Bruce Partridge, to make his report, Partridge said he had no report. Graduate student senator David Dunsmuir attacked Partridge on the issue, saying month after month no report from the chair is given.

"Giving no report shows disdain for the members of this assembly," Dunsmuir said. "I felt aggrieved, I now feel bitter."

Partridge asked if Dunsmuir proposed action on the matter, to which Dunsmuir said: "I feel the pattern of no reports is slightly unnerving from month to month to month. Something must be happening that the public and senate would like to hear."

Dunsmuir said after the meeting that since he became a senator last October, Partridge has made only two reports in the public segment of the regular monthly meetings. He made three reports in confidential meetings.

"This has to be an ominous development," Dunsmuir said. "There must be things we should know about. Senate is lacking the running commentary on university progress that we used to get with the past chairman (former acting president Robert Wallace)."

At the meeting, Kirk commented that it had been a long time since senate was informed of the activities of the campus planning committee, responsible for construction of buildings on campus.

He said it was often only after the fact that members of senate were informed of developments in university planning.

"These matters should be discussed by senate before being finalized," he said. "Too often we don't find out about these things until it's too late."

It was decided the campus planning committee, chaired by administration vice-president Jack Kyle, would make a report at the next senate meeting and that its terms of reference would be discussed.

Students Say No To Uvic Head

The traditional meeting between first-year students and the University of Victoria president has been cancelled this year because students and faculty voted non-confidence in Bruce Partridge as president last year.

Alma Mater Society frosh week co-ordinator Paul Watson said in a letter to Partridge's office "I can only assume that students do not recognize Bruce Partridge as the president of the University of Victoria and therefore it will not be necessary for Bruce Partridge to speak to any frosh assembly."

Watson said today the letter was in response to a telephone request from Partridge's office, asking when the frosh assembly was this year and whether Partridge was to speak at it.

The frosh assembly is traditionally held on Thursday of Frosh Week, which is today.

Earlier this year students and faculty voted overwhelming non-confidence in Partridge as president of Uvic.

In March the heaviest turnout of voting in AMS history saw more than 70 per cent of 2,775 students who voted call for Partridge's dismissal or resignation.

In April, 59 faculty members supported a motion of confidence in Partridge and 159 voted against it.

Partridge's office would not comment today on the frosh assembly issue. Partridge was not available for comment.

DEMONSTRATORS AT LEGISLATURE

Picketers Protest Mill Shutdowns

Picketes from the Rayonier pulp mill near Squamish paraded quietly in front of the legislature this morning protesting repeated mill shutdowns and exporting of wood chips and logs.

About 20 workers from the shutdown mill at Woodfibre, north of Vancouver, supported by representatives from Island mills at Crofton, Harmac and Gold River, are seeking government intervention in what they call "a cold-blodded plan" by Rayonier to wash its hands of any responsibility for employees.

Three-quarters of the 400 employed by the mill have been out of work since the mill was shut down 11 days ago. They have been off work 69 days in a total of five shutdowns since April.

The company has blamed a "soft" pulp market for the closures.

But Reg Ginn, president of Local 3, Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, said none of the 22 other mills in the province has had to shut down anything like as much. The longest any other mill has been shut down over the same period is a month, he said.

NO MONEY?

Ginn said Rayonier management claims it has no money to undertake needed maintenance during the shutdowns as the other mills have done keeping many of their men working.

At the same time the company is undertaking a $500 million development in Quebec which will ultimately see three mills built, with an estimated $40 million help from federal and provincial grants.

"We're just asking them to take care of the mills already in existence and treat the people half-decently," said Ginn.

CALLED AWAY

The protesters had a 9 a.m. appointment with Lands Forests and Water Resources Minister Ray Williston but were told he was called suddenly to a meeting in Vancouver.

Ginn said they hope to see Williston and possibly some other cabinet ministers later in the day.

Another problem they want to discuss is shipping wood chips to American mills for processing a move they say is costing jobs in Canada.

Rayonier is part of a giant international corporation with mills in the northwest U.S. and the logging rights to three-quarters of a million acres of forest in B.C. says the protesters' brief.

They call for International Telephone and Telegraphs the parent company, to be ordered by the province to maintain the Woodfibre community.

Export of logs and wood chips should be unconcitionally banned as long as there are inactive mills in B.C. The province should investigate Rayonier's operations "with a view to assuring that the immensely valuable privileges this company has received from the Crown are in fact utilized for the benefit of the people of B.C. and not merely for the further enrichment of a billionaire international conglomerate."

Gov't Action Or Power Lines Will Stay Up

Underground hydro and telephone wiring in B.C.'s municipalities will only come about when the B.C. government orders the change, a study released Wednesday says.

The study, released in Victoria at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention, states the cost of converting to underground wiring would be so high, neither property taxpayers or hydro ratepayers could bear the cost all at once.

A sample of the cost: If only the downtown area of Kamloops were converted, the tax increase to all property owners would be 25 per cent. If only the properties affected were charged for the conversion, their taxes would increase by 135 per cent.

★ ★ ★

Conversions in other municipalities could raise taxes by up to 41 per cent when all taxpayers foot the bill, and up to 521 per cent when only benefitting properties paid.

These high costs, coupled with B.C. Hydro's policy of refusing to absorb them, convinced the study group that no change will come "until the weight of public opinion causes the provincial government to legislate the desired changes."

The study says it is "of prime importance that municipal councils state their belief that undergrounding of electrical and other utility systems is essential if the public demand for over-all environmental improvement is to be met."

Because the taxpayer or consumer is the "final and common source of funds" for environmental improvement, the study says, the costs involved "should be viewed within the framework of benefits and costs to the community."

The study does say new subdivisions and new communities should and can have underground wiring "within the existing policies of the utility companies concerned."

★ ★ ★

Priority, however, should be given to conversion of wiring in downtown areas.

The study says the costs of converting to underground wiring in 30 downtown blocks of Victoria today would be $7,515,000. The actual cost of the work, done in 1962, is not given.

An estimate of the cost of conversion in the city of Vancouver excluding the university endowment lands is $350,819,000.

"It is evident . . . that other solutions need to be found apart from that of placing huge one-time costs on benefitting properties or one the benefitting municipality," the study says.

It is also "unrealistic" to expect the hydro user to pay for conversion through rate increases. Whereas today's overhead wiring is worth $275 million, a full underground system would cost $1 billion.

MAN STABBED IN FIGHT

Victoria police today are investigating the stabbing of a man in Bastion Square Wednesday night.

Police said when they arrived on the scene shortly after midnight they found Philip Hoen, 20, of 471 Boleskine Rd., had been involved in a fight and was stabbed in the stomach.

He was admitted to the intensive care unit of St. Joseph's Hospital, where a hospital spokesman said today he is in good condition.

Police said Hoen had been drinking with some friends in the beer parlor of the Churchill Hotel, 1140 Government St., and became involved in a fight with another man described as about 28 years, 5 feet 8 inches tall, husky build with fair hair and a goatee beard, who was wearing a red shirt and khaki pants.

This fight was broken up and Hoen left the premises by the front door, when he apparently became involved in a fight in Bastion Square, police said.

The man involved in the second fight was described as having slicked-back hair of fair to dark color, wearing dark-colored pants and "probably blue-colored" shirt. He was described as of husky build and about 5 feet 9 inches tall.

Air Race Winner's $5,000 To Help Fight Drug Abuse

A $5,000 grant to charity from West German flyer-businessman Joachim Blumschein, who won the London-Victoria Centennial '71 air race, will be used to combat drug abuse among young people, Premier Bennett announced today.

Bennett said the provincial and federal governments have contributed matching grants of $5,000. The $15,000 fund will be administered by the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C.

The money will finance a project to be called the Reach Out program. Bennett said the foundation will run the scheme in co-operation with the federal national health and welfare department.

★ ★ ★

Counselling and drug care agencies will be created to assist young people who have become drug users, Bennett said.

Blumschein won the race July 7 by finishing first among 54 contestants who completed the six-stage flight which began in London.

Blumscheins' prizes totalled $60,000, and he also won two trophies. After accepting his awards, Blumschein said he would donate $5,000 of his winnings to any charity selected by Bennett and Prime Minister Trudeau.

Young Lawyer First to Enter Race for N. Saanich Mayoralty

A young lawyer, Paul Grieve, 634 Land's End Road, has begun campaigning for the North Saanich mayoralty.

Encumbent J. B. Cumming, who has served six years as mayor, has made no decision regarding the December election.

Grieve started what he described as an "apolitical" campaign Wednesday morning by mailing information on registration to all local residents. He has not as yet announced his platform.

The lawyer, a two-year resident of North Saanich, has arranged for a commissioner for Oaths to be present at three locations in North Saanich on three separate days to assist prospective voters to register.

Meanwhile, the three North Saanich aldermen whose two years' terms of office end in December say it is too early to consider election matters. They are Ald. Nell Horth, Harry Taylor and Trevor Davis.

arthur mayse

WE WERE SITTING IN AN aluminum boat on a lake no great remove from the Arctic Circle. The 12-footer crept at trolling speed half a mile off a grimly rockbound shore. Three wire lines slanted into the depths. At the end of each pulsed a monstrous wobbler.

Overhead, the northern sky was more black than grey. It was raining so hard that the fat drops seemed to bounce inches high from the surface.

A thick-bodied lake trout with mottled grey hide lay between two pair of soaked feet. Thunder rumbled and lightning flashed, and I began to recall the warnings delivered by the woman from Maine who had rented us a boat on another lake.

Watch out for squalls, she had said. It can get very rough in a hurry.

Don't fall in, the water is ice-cold. Drowned people's bodies never come up.

Another, nearer lightning flash jagged from a dark cloud. The calm and hardy northerner at the business end of the outboard rig showed no sign of concern, but Win and I traded glances. We and the boat were the highest objects around, and those steel lines cutting the water didn't strike me as the happiest of companions.

Our position, you might say, was not altogether comfortable.

I wondered with more than a touch of longing how the guys on the coast were doing in the best salmon season for many a year. They would be catching springs and pinks, the lucky stiffs. Right now, in a Vancouver Island tideway, someone would be counting the leaps of a bucktail-hooked coho.

But the saltchuck was far distant, and it might be better to think about the cove on that other Northwest Territories lake where I caught my first jackfish.

The boat-woman, until a few months before, had been a librarian in Bangor. She loved books. Mention an author, and from long habit she would classify him by section and shelf.

"Oh yes," she'd say. "Kenneth Roberts . . . He's in section 'R', fiction, third shelf down. One of my favorites."

Her husband, once a Maine resort operator, had traded the woods for a job in public works. But he got fed up with city life, and here they were, summering in a tent and looking after the boats for the man who owned them.

Anyway, she told us, if we wanted jackfish, which were really northern pike and better esteemed by Americans than by northland Canadians, we had only to try the cove around the nearest point.

It was a lovely little bay, cupped by a marshy green shoreline. The sun shone, the sky was blue and the birch trunks glimmered white.

I tied a Victoria-bought Deadly Dick to my spinning line and flipped a cast. There was a slight check — hardly what I'd call a strike — and no resistance until the line was mostly in. Then a fish of about 20 inches thrashed on the surface. Seconds later, I snubbed it alongside and reached to a hip pocket for my pliers.

The jackfish had a flat head, a narrow body and a mean, elongated snoot. We studied each other for a moment, then I turned it loose.

On this larger lake, before the electrical display began and the rain pounded down, I'd connected with my first lake trout. It was a junior member of a species that yields 60-pounders, and on 400 feet of wire line, it had little chance for capers.

Even so, it kicked up a fuss when I winched it to the surface, and though blander than stream trout or salmon, its light-colored meat made good eating . . .

Right now, praise be, our pilot was asking if we'd like to head in and dry off.

Next day, sunshine returned. Win tagged a laker on light spin-casting gear in a shallow narrows. It became apparent that I'd underrated lake trout potential. The fish peeled line off the reel. It was both strong and tricky, and we came within an ace of losing it when it fouled the line on a snag.

A worthy prize, and the biggest of the trip.

From laziness which I now regret, we missed out on a hike-and-portage expedition that paid off in Arctic grayling. The violent sheen had faded from the sides of these swift-water battlers when I looked them over.

But lift a long, high dorsal fin, and a hint of color remained. Enough to furnish some notion of how the bearer of that proud banner must have looked when it arched from its pool below a northern rapid.

Dock Strike Hurts Santa's Prospects

VANCOUVER (CP) — The dock strike on the U.S. West Coast, dragging on from its summertime beginnings, is sabotaging Santa Claus in Canada.

Quite simply, the 76-day tieup of Pacific ports from San Diego to Seattle means business is booming beyond control in the port of Vancouver, to the dismay of Canadian importers.

With the flood of ships diverted to Vancouver because of the July 1 U.S. longshoremen's strike — trippling the load on port facilities here — goods from the Orient moving east by rail are being subjected to delays of up to six weeks.

"There are Christmas goods that will never see a Christmas tree," says Stan Garrod, president of the British Columbia Wharf Operators Association.

An Edmonton textile firm has announced 150 workers are being laid off because 300 cases of raw fabric from Japan are sitting at the bottom of the hold of a ship in English Bay.

Department stores across Canada are worried about future inventories, particularly retailers attempting to stock their shelves for Christmas.

FEAR BANKRUPTCY

"We're talking now of six-week delays," says Ian Mardock, west coast director of the Canadian Importers Association. "Some of our firms are very close to bankruptcy."

Eldon Industries of Toronto, which imports Japanese and Hong Kong toys through Vancouver, said that normally at this time it is at its pre-Christmas peak but is now a month behind.

Mardock places much of the blame on the national harbors board and the wharf operators and accuses them of not protecting their regular customers.

He says: "We have been trying to get an embargo on American cargo but they the harbors board won't act."

COULD HURT

But acting port manager Bill Duncan says an embargo "would really close the port down because we could not get ships discharged to take away Canadian exports."

The wharf operators insist they are doing all they can while the importers insist they could do a lot more.

The importers charge that the wharf operators and the steamship lines have broken the rules of cargo handling designed to protect the regular customers of the port.

They say the shipping lines, anxious to please the bulk of their customers — the Americans — are mainly taking on U.S.-bound cargo at foreign ports; what Canadian cargo is taken aboard is "deliberately buried" under American cargo to make sure the U.S. shipments are removed first on arrival in Vancouver.

Under the rules, Canadian shipments should be getting priority.

Duncan said the rules have been applied as strictly as possible, although the deliberate burying of Canadian goods has happened.

EMBARGO ASKED FOR U.S. GOODS

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Importers Association, at a special meeting here Wednesday, drafted a new appeal to federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson to embargo United States goods at the port of Vancouver.

The 648-member association contends that U.S. importers, hit by a strike by longshoremen at all but one West Coast port, have "gobbled up" all shipping space at Vancouver.

This will be the second petition to Jamieson asking that U.S. goods be blocked from entering the port. The telegram to the finance minister was to be sent today, an association spokesman said.

Inquiry Started In Attica Riot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Congress has begun investigating the bloody suppression of the Attica prison riot amid calls both for reform and criminal investigations. The White House has reiterated President Nixon's support of methods used to quell the rebellion.

Chairman Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.) of the House of Representatives select committee on crime announced Wednesday he and three other committee members will talk with New York state officials and prisoners to find how to prevent a recurrence of the Attica riot. Hearings will follow, he said.

The 13 black members of the House called on Attorney-General John N. Mitchell to appoint a special federal grand jury to investigate the "questionable circumstances" surrounding the decision of officials to storm rioter-held portions of the prison Monday.

White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler said the President has not withdrawn his support for New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's handling of the affair, despite subsequent findings that slain hostages were shot to death instead of knifed as previously reported. Rioters were reported not to have had guns.

Meanwhile, the justice department has quietly set up a special unit to protect the civil rights of prisoners.

Two cases already have been filed charging racial discrimination in the Mississippi state prison at Parchman and the county jail in Kansas City, Kan., and officials say more may be coming.

Two widely-known pathologists have begun examining bodies of the men who died in the bloody clash as controversy mounted over whether some hostages died from gunshot wounds or from having their throats slit.

Forty-two persons died in the rebellion which ended Monday when the prison was stormed by about 1000 heavily-armed state troopers, sheriff's deputies, prison guards and National Guard troops.

In Stratford, Ont., three U.S. film-makers say they will call for the impeachment of New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller and an investigation of what they called the murder of guards and prisoners at Attica prison in New York state.

Treat Retarded at Home, Report Says

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial government commission has harshly condemned the system of caring for mentally retarded persons in institutions, saying they should be returned either to their own homes, or to small, family-type dwellings.

"The concept I strongly advocate is that it is far more economical and humanitarian to give to the handicapped the total care he needs in his own community than by providing it in an institution," said the 197-page report of commissioner Walter B. Williston.

Premier William Davis, who saw the report before it was made public today, said Wednesday night it was "sharply critical of many aspects of the services provided by the government," but that it also states that progress made in the last 10 years is "something of which Ontario can be proud."

Mr. Davis, speaking to a Progressive Conservative nomination meeting for Eglinton riding, said his government would "not shield the facts from the public, nor make any effort to avoid its responsibility."

"We are even at this moment acting on some of the recommendations."

Mr. Williston was appointed July 8 by Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence to make a study of the current arrangements for the care and supervision of mentally retarded persons in Ontario.

About 7,000 mentally retarded persons receive care in Ontario institutions.

Mr. Williston urged that institutions for mentally retarded be "phased down" to 40 per cent of capacity through restrictions on admissions and an "intensive drive to rehabilitate those who can be absorbed into the community."

Mr. Lawrence ordered the study as the result of two cases involving mentally-retarded persons. Frederick Elijah Sanderson was found hanged last March 5 while working out of the Rideau Regional Hospital at Smiths Falls. Jean-Marie Martel, discharged April 4, 1968, from the same hospital was found last Feb. 18 suffering from severe frostbite after wandering away from his foster home.

Mr. Williston found that quarters provided for Mr. Sanderson for sleeping "were not fit for human habitation," but was not a major contribution to his death. He said it was a case of a "young man who hungered for attention and human support which had been completely turned off."

In both cases, he said there was negligence on the part of social workers and the institution, but not of the nature to warrant criminal charges.

"The basic fault lies in a system under which such accidents have occurred in the past. Tragedy will strike again in the future unless drastic but basic changes are made."

X Movies In Peril By Union

A decision by the British Columbia Projectionists Union not to show restricted movies after Oct. 8 came on instructions from union headquarters in the United States, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today.

Because of this, said Peterson, there is nothing he can do to help the projectionists out of the dilemma. Peterson said his information came from "highly-placed sources within the projectionists union."

However, a union official in Vancouver said today, "This is the first I've heard of that." The official had no other comment on Peterson's remarks.

Peterson said the union should have autonomy is setting policy. But he added the move may have the "good effect" of pressuring the movie industry to make films with higher moral standards.

Peterson said he sees about one movie a year. He said he is no authority on movies, but his understanding, from conversations with the public is that "movies have certainly declined as far as moral standards are concerned."

ROCKING CHAIR STUDENTS

TORONTO (CP) — The school system in suburban Etobicoke is so short of children this term that a school trustee has proposed filling vacant classrooms with senior citizens.

The school board was told Wednesday night that 613 fewer students registered for public school classes this year than at the start of the 1970-71 term and secondary enrolment was off by 285 students.

This prompted trustee Kenneth Kiddell to suggest that pensioners be recruited for courses in such subject as modern history, literature and conversational French.

"These retired people have paid taxes for years and have been good citizens," said Mr. Kiddell, in getting board agreement to study the suggestion.

"Now they have the leisure time—and we have the empty classrooms."

Voodoo Jets To Fly Within Week

Acceptance checks are now being carried out on the latest nuclear-equipped Voodoo jet interceptors recently received at CFB Comox, and the craft are expected to be flying within a week.

An armed forces' spokesman said today that the number of new planes already at the up-Island base was classifed information. He added the base's entire Voodoo fleet was expected to be of the new type by late February or early March.

The switchover is part of a program to replace the planes of Canada's air defence command, which have been in service about 10 years, with updated models from the United States.

About 56 of the older models have been traded in by Canada for a larger number of U.S. models in a program scheduled to end next year.

New engines and safety systems have been installed at Winnipeg. Further modifications and painting has been carried out in Carolina.

The new Voodoos will have speed capability of 1,200 miles an hour, better performance at low levels and increased weapons fire control.

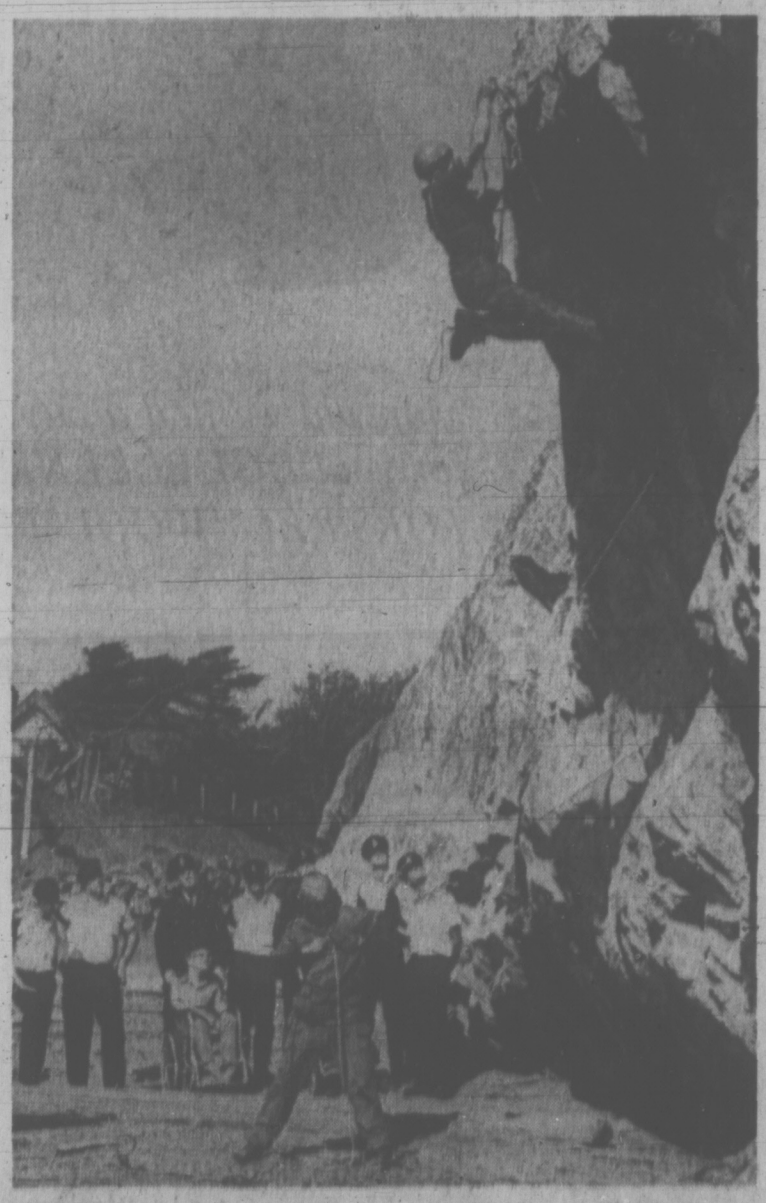
The Comox-based squadron is one of the last to be updated in the program. Squadrons at Chatham, N.B., and Bagotville, Que., are already using the newer-model Voodoos.

NO ADDRESS, NO NAME MAIL ARRIVALS

BUSHEY, England (UPI) — Dorothy Leaver's postcard to her mother from her vacation spot arrived in only two days even though it had no name or address.

The card was delivered to a neighbor along with the neighbor's own greeting from Mrs. Leaver. The neighbor brought it over to her mother.

"The post office must have seen the writing was similar and kept the cards together," said Mrs. Leaver. "They did a wonderful job."



UNITED APPEAL CAMPAIGN with the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, starts early and last all year. The battalion has again chosen the G. R. BIG JAKE PICKETED

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — About 15 persons picketed a John Wayne movie here Wednesday to protest remarks made by the movie star in Victoria Monday.

Wayne had said the proposed United States nuclear test at Amchitka in the Aleutians is none of the busines of Canada or Japan. He dismissed as "crap" protests that the underground blast might trigger a chain reaction or cause earthquakes or tidal waves.

The protest group picketed a movie entitled Big Jake, and made plans to picket the Wayne movie Green Berets, a war film scheduled to be shown in the city soon.

City Cold to Offer Of 50% Salary Pay

Victoria has no plans to take advantage of the provincial government's offer to pay 50 per cent of salaries of welfare recipients who are given new jobs in B.C., civic officials said today.

No proposals to use the plan have been brought forward by elected officials, but one alderman says the plan is "simplistic" and won't help to solve unemployment.

Ald. Peter Pollen said Wednesday the root cause of unemployment is the lack of technically capable workers.

"Society is such a complex, highly structured system that it is not that easy to take people who are technically unqualified and bring them into this technical social structure with such ease," Pollen said.

The government has asked municipalities as well as private individuals and companies to hire welfare recipients to ease unemployment.

However, Victoria officials point out that for municipalities, already straining under the weight of welfare payments, it would be still more expensive to use the government program. Whereas now the cities and towns pay 15 per cent of welfare costs, the government plan would require them to pay 50 per cent.

NEW SCHEME TO TACKLE OIL SLICKS

Idea Is Good, But Who'll Pay?

The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — The "experts" agree that Michael Spencer-Davies has an excellent scheme for tackling oil slicks. The trouble is that they are all committed to other methods, and although there is a sneaking suspicion that Spencer-Davies may have the best answer, no organization seems prepared to put up the money to find out.

Government scientists and the oil companies' pollution experts have put a great deal of money into schemes to spray slicks with either detergent or sand, sinking it to the bottom of the sea.

WORRIED

Marine biologists are extremely worried about the ultimate effect of the detergents, but this has caused no slackening into research into the spray schemes. Which is, basically, why there is no money to examine the idea of Spencer-Davies, who has given up his job as a junior executive with a shipping company to push the idea as best he can.

"My first hurdle is to gain acceptance for the concept that some special agency needs to be set up to tackle oil pollution. After that I think I can provide the answer to how it should be done," he says.

1,000-TON TANK

He believes that four 130-foot catamarans could serve the English Channel and North Sea, setting off at 20 knots to tackle any slick sighted. On arrival, two tugs would tow out inflatable booms from the catamarans, channelling the oil slick towards the vessel, with would then pump in the oil and water.

Centrifugal separators would extract the oil and then pump it into a 1,000-ton tank which the vessel would be towing.

Spencer-Davies calls the scheme "the sea mantis," because in diagram form the catamaran with its boom looks rather like a praying mantis. It has been examined with considerable interest by the oil companies, but each said it would wait until unified action was taken on the problem.

Because of the international aspect, he believes it would be difficult for the sea mantis to be run by any one government.

Spencer-Davies has constructed a working model of his sea mantis which has been tested with acceptable results. "I am not merely an inventor, I really am trying to co-ordinate the use of equipment that already exists to tackle this problem, which is really neglected on a scandalous scale," he said.

FLOWN INTO ACTION

"A few years ago, the oil companies said that about five million tons of oil was spilled into the sea each year. I don't know what the figure is now, but I do know that the sea mantis could suck up about 1,000 tons an hour."

He believes that if the system is established in the Channel and North Sea, other countries will adopt it. He even envisages inflatable catamarans centred on strategic parts of the world to be flown into action whenever a tanker sinks.

"I estimate that each sea mantis would cost $500,000 to equip fully," he says. "I don't think that is terribly expensive when you consider the costs of pollution."

BENSON FEARS TRADE 'WAR'

LONDON (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today urged a fundamental reform of the world monetary system to prevent any outbreak of a devastating international trade war.

Benson told an emergency meeting of the 10 richest non-Communist nations—the Group of 10—that recent United States measures to protect the American economy pose a serious threat to the freedom of world trade.

Benson, this year's chairman of the group, said a full examination of the current monetary system should be made by the International Monetary Fund.

"We must proceed at once with the process of currency realignment and proceed as quickly as possible with the reduction of trade restrictions throughout the world," the Canadian minister said.

"It would facilitate the immediate adjustments required if our American colleagues could tell us more precisely what conditions . . . have to be met before they will remove the (10-per-cent import) surcharge."

Benson was referring to a U.S. decision announced Aug. 15 to impose the new import duty and to suspend the gold convertibility of the dollar.

Benson said the present instability in international monetary markets has forced a number of countries to restrict capital flows in an effort to ease pressure on their currencies.

"The real danger is that this pattern of restriction will be extended to the trade field.

"This points to the urgent necessity of dealing with the present situation before it degenerates into a process that will be extremely difficult reverse."

The minister said it is unlikely any satisfactory set of exchange rates can be negotiated while the import duty remains in effect.

He said extensive action is needed to "dissipate the serious clouds that now hang over the future of international trade."

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer managing director of the IMF, urged the Group of 10 today to adopt a four-point compromise plan for overcoming the monetary crisis.

Schweitzer unveiled a plan that conference sources said included these points:

1. A general realignment in the exchange rates of the world's leading currencies, including an upward revaluation of the major European currencies and the Japanese yen and a downward devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

2. A new reserve system in which special drawing rights in the IMF would assume some of the reserve role backing currencies now held by gold.

3. An effort to swing the U.S. balance of payments from its current deficit to a surplus, in which the U.S. allies would assume a share of the burden.

4. After the achievement of these steps the time would be ripe to remove the 10-per-cent duty on imports.

No clear-cut solutions are expected at the end of the two-day emergency conference of the group which began Wednesday.

No More Trade Curbs, Canada Pleads

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has appealed to the United States to refrain from imposing additional trade restrictions in response to a proposed program to provide federal subsidies to Canadian exporters.

A letter to U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally from Finance Minister E. J. Benson asks him to regard the subsidy program as a measure to maintain employment, not as a form of retaliation against U.S. import surcharges imposed last month.

At the same time, Canadian authorities are asking Japan and European trading partners to guard against permitting a heavy increase of exports to Canada.

Officials are particularly worried that shipments of steel, automobiles and textile products originally intended for the U.S. market may be diverted into Canada, disrupting markets here.

The government's actions were disclosed today by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin at a session of the Commons finance committee.

The appeals to Canada's trading partners constitute efforts to minimize disruption of Canadian trade, production and employment resulting from the U.S. trade restrictions invoked Aug. 15.

Canada has appealed unsuccessfully for exemption from the U.S. surcharges. At the same time, it is attempting to persuade Japan and Western Europe to co-operate in developing a new system of currency exchange that would benefit U.S. trade.

In the meantime, there are official fears in Ottawa that the program to help Canadian exporters carrying grants that would cover up to two-thirds of the U.S. surcharges will trigger U.S. countervailing duties against the entry of Canadian goods.

It depends on whether the U.S. treasury secretary regards the Canadian legislation as an export-subsidy program thereby triggering countervailing duties—or, the Canadian authorities would prefer, as an innocent measure designed strictly to stave off further unemployment.

Peking Gets U.S. Backing

Security Council Seat

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States proposed today the permanent seat on the UN Security Council be given to Communist China.

The proposal was put forward by U.S. Ambassador George Bush at a meeting attended by more than 30 delegations friendly to Nationalist China.

Bush presented an amended draft resolution on the China issue which would give UN membership to both the Chinese Communists and the Nationalist Chinese with the security council seat now held by the Nationalists going to the Communists instead.

The U.S. revised the draft of the resolution after a number of Taiwan's staunchest supporters requested the change. The resolution goes to the assembly early next week.

After the meeting Bush expressed confidence that the U.S. policy for a dual Chinese representation in the UN is on the way to success.

"I have a distinct feeling that there is a forward motion," he said.

Diplomatic sources said the U.S. action was taken to get the support of Japan which has great prestige in Asia.

NEWS BRIEFS

Debate Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — Approval was given in the Commons today for a special debate on the government's refusal to make payments to the Canadian wheat board under legislation still in force. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said the special debate could be held this evening. Formal impeachment notice was filed today against three cabinet ministers.

49 Killed

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — A Soviet-made TU134 passenger plane of the Hungarian Airline crashed today near Kiev, in the Soviet Union, killing all 49 persons aboard, the Hungarian news agency MTI said. MTI said it had no further details.

Deadly Attack

SAIGON (Reuter) — Fifteen persons were killed and 57 injured by a bomb blast Wednesday night at a fashionable nightclub in what appeared to be the most deadly terrorist attack in Saigon for more than six years.

NO WELFARE FOR UNDER-19s

VANCOUVER (CP) — City welfare director Walter Boyd has cut off social assistance payments to most persons under the age of 19, charging that many young applicants simply want to "shack up, blow grass and generally dig the scene at taxpayer expense."

Boyd took the action through a directive to the city welfare staff to remove all 16- and 17-year-olds and most 18-year-olds from the assistance rolls. He said about 250 persons are affected.

Foods Lead Index Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — The largest mid-summer increase in food prices in more than a decade occurred last month, putting food prices three per cent higher than they were before last fall's supermarket price war, Statistics Canada reported today.

This was by far the largest factor in sending the consumer price index up to a record 135 from 134.1 in July and 130.5 in August last year, based on 1961 prices equalling 100.

In dollar terms, it meant that last year's food bill of $13.19 cost $13.59 in August this year, 26 cents more than in July. After the supermarkets slashed their prices last fall, the price for a comparable basket of goods dropped to $12.56 in December.

The over-all index last month stood 3.4 per cent higher than a year earlier. This showed an acceleration of the rate of price increases, after it had slowed earlier this year to about two per cent.

It meant, said the statistics bureau, that the purchasing power of the 1961 consumer spending dollar was cut to 74 cents last month. It had been 75 cents in July, and 77 cents in August last year.

CLOTHES CHEAPER

While food prices lead the parade of higher prices last month, they were spread over nearly all segments of the overall index which is generally regarded as a measure of the cost of living. Only clothing prices showed any downward movement, and it was small—two-tenths of one per cent.

But some consumer durables — items that a family buys infrequently, expecting them to last a long time—also showed some price moderation. Included were prices for new cars, furniture and carpets.

In percentage terms, the index was up seven-tenths of one per cent in the past month, and 3.4 per cent in the past year. Economists believe a consumer price increase of more than two per cent a year is inflationary.

FOOD PRICES UP

Food price increases between July and August in the last five years have averaged 1.2 per cent, but this year they jumped by almost twice that. The statistics bureau said almost all foods had higher prices except vegetables.

Last month's food prices were 8.2 per cent higher than

Bogeyman Land Developer 'Is a Mythical Creature'

The bogeyman land developer who inflates land prices through monoplistic deals in B.C. suburbs is a mythical creature only, according to a study released in Victoria today.

Despite land prices that have risen faster than other housing indexes, developers are only taking out of land what people are willing to pay in a healthy land market.

In an interview before presenting his report to the convention, Prof. Stan Hamilton of the University of British Columbia said he found "no artificial price inflation" in land trading in the province's suburban areas, where housing subdividing normally occurs.

"People say they can't afford a house — I say they can't afford a house where they want it," Hamilton said.

The study was sponsored by the UBCM and aided by a grant from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Hamilton co-authored the report with Prof. R. U. Rateliff. Both men are in NBC's urban land economics division of the faculty of Commerce and Business Administration.

Hamilton said their study shows there may be individual cases where land is unfairly priced, but the total effect of land dealings does not indicate prices are too high because of monopolistic land holdings by developers.

There are close to twice as many acres of suburban land sold as there are acres subdivided, indicating land is not dribbled out for use at ransom prices by companies with huge holdings, Hamilton said.

"There is almost a total absence of land-banking by developers," he said, but added that people other than developers are holding land. These and the "little old lady" who have been there for 40 years" and include the "farmers who refuses to move out and let new development in."

Ratcliff and Hamilton took samples of land trading in Saanich, Kamloops, Richmond, Surrey and Coquitlam between 1954 and 1970.

There is no doubt, Hamilton said, that land prices have risen faster than the consumer price index, than the cost of construction, the cost of servicing and other indicators. The only aspect of development with faster rising costs is financing of money.

'LAST CENT'

Developers are "extracting the last cent from the public," he said, "but they are doing it in a competative situation."

A formula worked out for the study which traced the long-term trend of land price increases between 1954 and 1970 shows land was inflated at about 7.25 per cent per annum, compounded.

Ratcliff and Hamilton's land cost price index shows land that cost $100 in 1954 cost $306 in 1970.

Hamilton said some people may have expected the study to recommend that municipalities get into the land bank business in order to improve subdividing performance.

Secret Tip: Early Blast

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The protest vessel Greenpeace sailed out of Vancouver harbor Wernesday night, planning to get to Amchitka Island "as soon as possible" because of a telephone tip that the United States Atomic Energy Commission has advanced the date of a nuclear test on the island.

Jim Bohlen, one of 12 persons aboard the 80-foot Canadian halibut boat, would say only that the Washington, D.C., source of the tip was a reliable and sympathetic one.

The Greenpeace, originally scheduled to sail for the Aleutians at noon, moved out just before 11 p.m. because of delays in fuelling and cleanup details.

Crew members plan to protest the five-megaton underground blast by cruising off the island's three-mile territorial limit on the day of the test, some time in October.

They expect now to bypass planned stops at the British Columbia ports of Comox, Campbell River and Prince Rupert and go directly to the Aleutians.

GOV'T 'VALET SERVICE'?

If anyone wants to hire a personal valet, the B.C. government will pay half the man's salary.

This is the way Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell described the government's intentions to get people off welfare rolls when he spoke Wednesday to the annual convention of the Union of B.C. municipalities in Victoria.

The program announced earlier this month by Premier Bennett and administered by Campbell, is an attempt to avoid the "mountains of red tape" common to other forms of welfare, Campbell said.

He said he wanted the program to become something "peculiarly made in British Columbia."

A requirement of the plan is that the hired person be on the welfare rolls and Campbell said the government is issuing "certificates of opportunity" to people "if they are eligible for the program."

Campbell said there is no need for confusion about how the plan works. It would be perfectly correct for someone to hire a personal valet and charge the government half the salary.

"The answer is yes if you have an idea for employing people," Campbell stated. "The answer is no if you are expecting a grandiose scheme."

Edith Lashing Lafayette

CAMERON, La. (AP) — Hurricane Edith lashed into the heavily-populated Lafayette and Baton Rouge areas today with 90-mile-an-hour winds, tornadoes and heavy rains.

At least one death was reported.

The storm had struck the shore at virtually deserted Cameron and the winds then were hitting 100 miles an hour as it headed northeastward into Louisiana and toward central Mississippi.

The fatality was reported at Lake Charles where a man was apparently washed overboard.

Tornadoes struck two schools and several residential areas in Baton Rouge.

One teacher suffered a broken rib and seven pupils were cut by glass.

Nearby, the Sherwood Plaza Shopping Centre, in the eastern part of town, was reported destroyed.

Computer Predicts Health for 10 Years

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — When Dr. Lewis C. Robbins of Indianapolis gets out his tip sheets and begins figuring the odds of your living another 10 years, you can bet your life he is right.

Dr. Robbins, his colleagues and their computers are working out a new medical science, called "prospective medicine," which allows them to predict the health of any person for the next 10 years.

The insurance companies have been doing it for years about the death of any person, he told about 500 doctors at a meeting of the College of Family Physicians Wednesday. They can accurately predict the odds on most people living to collect that life insurance.

But Dr. Robbins, head of a health hazard appraisal unit, wants to do it about life and health.

Using statistics carefully collected for about 20 years, he can take a history, supplied by a family doctor, and work out a graphic chart showing what the odds are on your living healthfully for the next 10 years.

He uses a chart, which shows the average life expectancy, and a set of bar graphs showing what might happen to you.

For example, if you are a white male between 40 and 44, and you smoke and drink and don't do any more exercise than an average downtown businessman, your chances of a heart attack in the next 10 years are about double the average.

In fact, you're a longshot in the health race.

However, if you were willing to cut out the smoking, cut down on the drinking and take on an exercise program of, say, walking two miles a day, then your chances of reaching age 54 improve about 10 times. They're even better than half the national average.

Similar to Dr. Robbins' research is another investigation being demonstrated at the college meeting.

Dr. John Merriman of Saskatoon is making physical tests on apparently healthy persons, then drawing up a profile sheet showing how they compare with their ideal selves.

He has even been testing doctors at the college's meeting.

"During the first day of testing," he said in an interview, "we did about 60 doctors and we found two who were showing the first changes for a heart attack in their electrocardiograph."

In Dr. Merriman's tests, the patient has his height, weight and blood pressure recorded and a few questions, including some about smoking, are asked for a history. Then a blood sample is taken and an electrocardiograph done.

The patient then is asked to get on an exercise bicycle and do certain amount of "work." The electrocardiograph tracing is taken while he is pedalling the bicycle and his blood pressure and pulse rates are recorded.

Dr. Merriman, who is doing his research for the University of Saskatchewan, hasn't compiled the statistics on "his doctors" yet, but it appears that they are no more and no less healthy than the average man, he said.

The four-day meeting, designed to provide a continuing education program for family doctors, ends today.

Quebec Waters Stand Against Ottawa Aid

Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC CITY — The urgency that Premier Robert Bourassa attaches to fulfilling his 1970 election pledge that he would make federalism work in Quebec is pointed out by his moderate proposals on reforming the system of 'baby bonuses.'

The 38-year-old premier reopened the possibility of new and substantial talks on rewriting the constitution when he sent a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau earlier this month outlining his proposals.

The contents of the letter, in which Bourassa says Quebec will accept federal handling of baby bonuses if his government can determine how the money will be distributed, were released to the press here Wednesday.

The Bourassa letter is a significant change from his demand at the June constitutional conference in Victoria that control of the entire social welfare field by Quebec be guaranteed in a new constitution.

The rejection of the idea by the federal government and the other provincial premiers, led to a decision by Bourassa and his cabinet to turn down a tentative formula for amending the constitution that had been agreed upon at a conference in Ottawa last Fedruary.

NOT BACKING DOWN

However, the premier Wednesday denied suggestions by some reporters that he had backed down from his position of last June.

Bourassa said that future Quebec-Ottawa agreements of social welfare issues must be "given a constitutional character" if Quebec is to receive guarantees for the future. He added that, for the moment, Quebec is working for a new "mechanism" that would respect Quebec's priorities.

Bourassa stressed that there has been no "agreement" on the issue with Ottawa.

A new mood of optimism that another round of talks on the constitution may be in the offing has followed news of the Bourassa letter, which prime minister said he found "interesting."

However, the talks might have to be postponed until after the next federal election, expected in the spring.

LIKES REFORM

Trudeau said in June that rejection of the proposed amending formula on the constitution would result in an end to talks on reforming the distribution of powers between the federal government and provinces in the immediate future.

Bourassa hailed proposed family allowance reforms contained in bill C-264, which federal Health Minister John Munro made public Monday in the Commons. The bill would reduce by more than a million the number of Canadians receiving "baby bonuses," but it would increase payments to lower income families.

However, Bourassa stressed that his proviso about having the final say on dividing up the payments would have to be met.

Munro has noted that Bourassa's letter, dated Sept. 2, was received too late to be taken into consideration when drawing up the new bill.

ANSWERING CRITICS

By modifying the stand he took at the constitutional conference in Victoria, the premier has gone a long way to answering critics who say he has failed in his election promise that he would make federalism work.

The opposition, mainly the separatist Parti Quebecois, will be the chief benefactors if there is no settlement of the lingering constitutional question before the next Quebec election expected in about three years.

However, even if Bourassa's letter doesn't result in a re-opening of constitutional talks, the premier has taken a step to destroy the image that he is the man who threw a "wet blanket" on federal-provincial reform.

It is significant that in his letter, Bourassa expressed hope that the problems of manpower assistance and adult education — two major sectors of the social welfare field Quebec wants to control — be dealt with in the same "spirit."

'Serious Financial Difficulties

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa says one of the major Quebec economic problems confronting him is the lackof competent financial administrators.

In an interview published in Le Devoir today, the premier said he sees no immediate solution to the problem until the current younger genration reacses an age where they can use their dynamism, competence and education in responsible positins. He rejected suggestions to hire administrators outside Quebec.

The premier also said Quebec state enterprises are having serious financial difficulties and expect even bigger deficits to come.

"I do not want to be more pessimistic tsan necessary but with the problems we know, 1971 will not be an extraordinary year," said Mr. Bourassa. "We are going through a very difficult period."

But there are other problems besides the lack of administrators.

"Perhaps the role of the state in business should be rethougst" Mr. Bourassa suggested.

Piggyback Mammoth Rocket Seen

SEATTLE (AP) — A rocket as big as a 747 jumbo jet, carrying a smaller rocket the size of a 707 jet on its back, could be blasting into space and returning to earth to be launched again within the next few years.

The major United States aerospace firms now are preparing final proposals for a reusable space shuttle that could cut the costs of the U.S. space program drastically. At present, each Saturn V rocket launch costs roughly $200 million and leaves little that can be used again.

The space shuttle design calls for two separate vehicles —a booster and an orbital unit—that will be launched vertically into space while hooked together. At a height of about 40 miles they will separate and return to earth to land in the manner of conventional jet aircraft.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration could award the final contract for design and development anytime after October, when the current phase of development funding expires.

NASA plans call for the first horizontal flight test in 1976 or 1977 and for the first manned shuttle flight in 1978.

New Guinea Dispute Near End

MONTREAL (CP) — Richard Salisbury, a McGill University professor, believes he has found a solution to the dispute between New Guinea's dissident Tolai tribesmen and the Australian government.

"The New Guinea cabinet is studying my report and I expect several recommendations to be implemented shortly" the 45-year-old expert on New Guinea said in an interview.

Salisbury has just returned from New Guinea following a month-long on-the-spot study of the dispute. It was his third trip to New Guinea. After studies in New Guinea in 1961 and 1967 he published a paper on the economic and political development of the Tolai people.

Leslie Johnson New Guinea's Australian administrator, called on the McGill anthropologist to help mediate the dispute.

"The dispute has become so violent that some Tolai tribesmen resorted to killing the Australian district commissioner in New Guinea," Salisbury added.

The main point of contention is the Australian government's desire to amalgamate under one council the separate municipal government of Rabaul a town of 10,000 inhabitants, and of the surrounding Tolai-controlled territory.
